2 Wars, Oil and Asiatic He Worked With Ford Mr. Hughes on Monroe To Protect Husbands

— By Arthur Brisbane —

Copyright, 1928, by Star Co.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., invited Robert W. Stewart, head of Standard Oil of Indiana, to resign. Stewart, his friends say, won't resign, and "Wall Street" says "war coming in Standard Oil ranks."

Unless the Rockefeller family has changed, that war will be like an express train meeting a small automobile at a crossing. When an irresistible force meets an immovable obstacle, the immovable obstacle is apt to move, if the irresistible force happens to be the combined resources of the Rockefellers and their friends.

A little war, starting between China and Japan, may become a big war. You never can tell what will happen when a lighted match is dropped in a forest.

Enough has happened already to show the difference between Japan and China. The French have a saying, "Comme on batrait la Chine," "Like beating China." According to the French, beating China is the easiest thing in the world. Japan did it easily the last time. Millions of Chinese didn't even know the war had begun.

However, Chinese are brave, and murdering each other, North fighting South, they have learned things they did not know before.

"Let him not boast that putteth his armor on."

"In the early days," not long ago, two men stood shoulder to shoulder at the work bench of a little shop in Detroit. One of them, with a keen, thin face, "was always thinking." That was Henry Ford. The other, David Gray, died yesterday, in Santa Barbara, leaving a fortune of millions that will be increased two or three million dollars, thanks to a recent income tax decision.

Henry Ford works on, starting in the automobile business all over again, with a new car, planning a new, more powerful tractor, working for new ideas that will mean millions for a few, good wages for many.

Fortunate were many, close to Ford "in the old days." Fortunate are all that think as they work.

Charles Evans Hughes renders public service in his lecture, "Our Relations to the Western Hemisphere." Mr. Hughes shows one miss of the Monroe Doctrine that they are enemies of this country and this continent. The Panama canal and aviation makes that doctrine, "essentially defensive, threatening none, a safeguard with which no responsible American would be rash enough to attempt to dispense."

Vienna's "League for the Protection of Men" seeks to protect them against designing wives.

The league writes to Charlie Chaplin, "Austria is a hell for husbands," and invites him to come and tell about America.

Mr. Chaplin, who has had rough experiences, could tell the protected husbands: "You ain't seen nothing until you explore Hollywood."

Schopenhauer, in his studies in pessimism, says women are engaged in a conspiracy "to make every man support some one woman all of her life."

That, fortunately, is true. And that wise conspiracy has gradually civilized men during the past 1,000,000 years. They are not really civilized yet, as any wife can testify.

Robert Weiner, once sentenced to death, walks to freedom after 12 months in the death house.

Twelve men walked past him to the electric chair while he waited his turn. Once more in Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, May 11 (AP)—The dirigible Italia, ready for a flight to the North Pole, started her first trip into the polar regions early this morning and is expected back at Kings Bay in about 40 hours.

The huge dirigible, under command of Umberto Nobile, who already has made one dirigible flight to the North Pole, took a northwestward course, the same as that taken by the Norge in 1926.

It made about 38 miles an hour and in half an hour was out of sight of those watching at Kings Bay.

It was believed that Gen. Nobile

Hagen Wins British Golf

Sandwich, England, May 11—Walter Hagen the American champion, turned in a pair of 72's today and won his second British open championship. The Haig went into the lead by a single stroke at the end of the morning round with Gene Sarazen and Jose Jurado tied for second place.

Jurado, the sensational South American eliminated himself by taking an 80 during his final whirl and Sarazen had to turn in a 76 to beat his fellow countryman. The only other contestant who had a chance of upsetting the American champion was Archie Compston. Like Sarazen, he failed to come through.

Although it was a new setting for Walter Hagen, that of pacemaker, at the start of the final round, The Haig played in his usual carefree style.

At times it was noticeable that Hagen took more time studying his shots and only on rare occasions did he risk getting into trouble by endeavoring to pick up another stroke on Sarazen and Compston.

However, at the 15th hole he re-

650 PASSENGERS IN PERIL WHEN ENGINE PLUNGES IN HARBOR

Three persons were hurt today and a number of women fainted from fright when an engine drawing a heavily loaded train of six cars plowed through the bumper at the tracks end on the wharf at the East Boston terminal of the Narrow Gauge railroad and dropped into the harbor.

Engineer William Tennett of Winthrop and Fireman John Warren of East Boston leaped from the cab just before the engine broke its back, the boiler and front end going overboard while the cab remained on the wharf with the tender and cars.

Fireman Warren, who was cut and bruised when he jumped, and Miss Elsie Small, 17, of 16 Haviland ave., Lynn, who claimed to have been pushed from a car step, were taken to the East Boston Relief Hospital. George H. Hatch, 30 Wentworth st., Lynn, sustained cuts to his fingers and hands when he swung off the moving train.

Tremendous confusion resulted, but traffic was not affected, and so far as could be learned no one was seriously injured.

The accident occurred at 8:15, as the train, carrying 650 passengers picked up from Lynn on, was making the Marginal st. terminal at the end of the trip.

Engineer Tennett had just pulled out of the tunnel to enter the terminal when he found that his brakes

This Narrow Gauge engine parted company with itself when the front end plunged into the harbor at the East Boston terminal and the other half stayed on the pier. The brakes failed to work and the engine plowed through the bumper at the end of the track. Three persons were hurt, women fainted and there was great excitement among 650 passengers.

MRS. WHITNEY SPRINGS GIRL 'DATE' TELEGRAM

Laconia, N. H., May 11—Springing a last-minute surprise today, as all evidence in the Whitney divorce trial ended, Mrs. Frances Clarke Whitney, Boston society wife, produced the original of a telegram alleged to have been sent by her husband, Harold C. Whitney, referring to a "date" with a girl.

The telegram was addressed to Edwin F. Torrey, Clinton, N. Y., and read:

"Write me R. A. A. name and address of girl in Amsterdam (N. Y.). Make date for me Thursday night. Must run as have to get to races. Love to all, Steve."

The Western Union manager for Laconia, Weirs, Meredith and Lakeport offices was summoned into court in order to get the telegraph office from which it was sent.

The witness, Rock A. Coto of Laconia, handed the telegram to Col. Stephen S. Jewett, chief of counsel for Mrs. Whitney, after explaining it was sent July 10, 1927, from the Weirs office and charged to Harold O. Whitney.

Whitney, who had apparently been much bored by the day's testimony, showed life for the first time and

SIX STATE DETECTIVES AID GRAFT RING PROBE

Six State Police detectives were assigned today to take part in the investigation of graft and extortion in connection with liquor, gambling and vice in the city of Boston.

These detectives, in plain clothes, were on duty in the vicinity of the grand jury room in the Suffolk County Courthouse in Pemberton sq. as witnesses assembled to testify.

A girl witness, whose identity the District Attorney William J. Foley and his staff carefully guarded, was among those waiting to testify. She did not appear at the courthouse, but was waiting in the office of her lawyer, near by, until her turn should come.

A South End hotel proprietor, who "squawked" after paying $65,000 for "protection," according to reports, was also waiting in a lawyer's office directly across the street from the courthouse. He is the key witness in the investigation.

Police stenographers, who listened in on conversation at the hotel when the graft ring made its final effort to extract money from the proprietor, were in the corridor of the grand jury room ready to tell what they heard.

The presence of a Federal agent, said to represent Hubert C. Thompson, assistant U. S. district attorney, created much comment. His appearance, following that of Owen J. McKenna, Treasury Department agent yesterday, tended to confirm the be-

Highway Safety Editor Boston Evening American and Former Registrar of Motor Vehicles

ONE of the saddest things in connection with the duties of the registrar of motor vehicles is the recording of the killing and maiming of little children.

At the beginning of each year cold statistics tell the registrar that within the next twelve months approximately 250 homes will be darkened by the tragedy of death and sorrow and suffering brought into 7,000 more homes, because of serious injuries due to the operation of motor vehicles on our highways.

While those in charge of the registry can forecast almost to a certainty the number of accidents which will occur in the ensuing year, of course no one can tell where the blow will fall.

HOOVER SPENT $250,000; MOSES IS GO-BETWEEN

Washington, May 11—Herbert Hoover's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination will not cost him more than $250,000, the Senate campaign fund investigating committee was informed today by Hoover's principal manager, ex-Congressman James W. Good. Good estimated various Hoover organizations throughout the country have spent approximately $230,000 thus far.

Washington, May 11—Secretary Herbert Hoover today revealed that Senators George H. Moses (R.), New Hampshire, and Frederick M. Sackett (R.), Kentucky, were the "go-betweens" in his efforts to reach an agreement with Senator Guy P. Goff on the West Virginia delegation to the Republican convention.

Goff charged Hoover sent him an offer through an unnamed senator to stay out of the West Virginia primary if Goff would make him (Hoover) the state's second choice.

Goff rejected the offer and termed it an "attempt at moral bribery."

Today Hoover named Moses and Sackett as the "go-betweens" in a letter to the committee. The letter follows:

"In respect to inquiries by Senator Bratton, I have received ap-

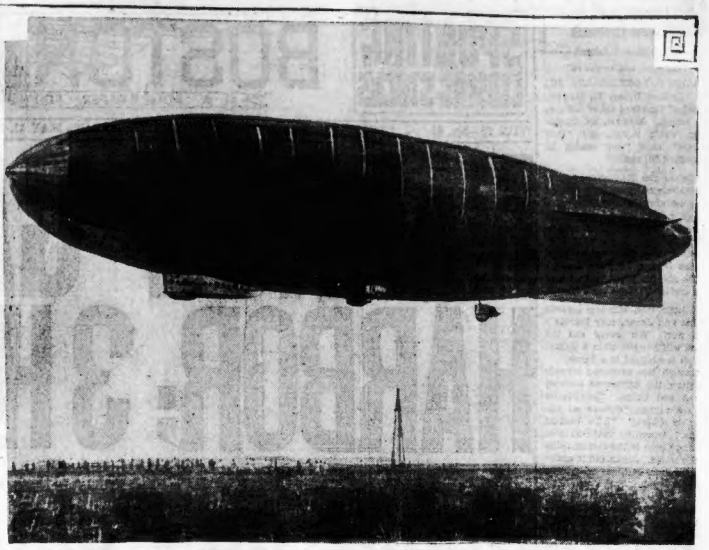
NOBILE HOPS INTO POLAR ZONE ABOARD THE DIRIGIBLE ITALIA



NOBILE READY FOR HOP OVER TOP OF WORLD

Daring Italian flier and his gallant crew today left Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, on first experimental hop into the polar regions. The aerial explorers planned to return within 40 hours. On today's trip Gen. Nobile intended to merely explore the surroundings of his ultimate goal—the North Pole. Later he hopes to land there and plant a cross given him by the Pope. Map shows perilous wastes over which explorations will be conducted.

The dirigible is similar in construction to the Norge, with which Roald Amundsen and Nobile flew over the Arctic in 1926. Gen. Nobile's radio dispatches from polar regions will appear exclusively in Boston Evening American.

MEET TO URGE UNION STATION

Residents of a number of cities and towns for 25 miles around Boston, interested in the proposal for a Back Bay union station met at noon today at the Hotel Westminster.

The meeting was held by the joint committee on the station and representatives of many organizations in the uptown district were present. It was reported that forms for a petition have been prepared for circulation.

The committee reported that private capital is ready to undertake the construction of the building.

Profit awaits both buyer and seller who meet through Classified Want Ads.

Short Lobsters From Nova Scotia Will Grow Up in Bay State

More than $5000 worth of short lobsters, seized in the past three weeks in Nova Scotia shipments, today found watery homes again in Massachusetts Bay.

With Ernest C. Cloon, game warden of the Fisheries and Game Commission in charge, the State police boat Productor made the trip to Boston Light and distributed the delectables between there and Scituate. All were less than the nine-inch length required by law.

The lobsters were stored and kept alive at Commercial Wharf since seizure.

intended to explore the surroundings of the North Pole first and return about midnight Saturday night.

The crew of the ship met at the starting place at 6 o'clock this morning and boarded her inside the hangar to try out the motors. At 7:35 a. m. 200 Italian helpers took the ship from the hangar and Gen. Nobile, in the uniform of his rank in the Italian air service, came out of his headquarters and greeted his friends heartily.

The two forward motors were started while Gen. Nobile posed for the cameramen and the airship at 7:45 moved into the air as the ground crew let go the restraining rope.

Attaining a height of about 700 feet, with her three motors working, the Italia started into the dim unknown to the accompaniment of Fascist shouts of "E Lal E Lal."

The Italia has been at Kings Bay since May 6 waiting for favorable weather and being prepared for a series of trips over north polar regions under Gen. Nobile. The general has made one previous flight over the Pole, in 1926, with Roald Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth in the dirigible Norge.

The present undertaking intends to explore many regions about which little is known.

These include Lenin Land, formerly Nicholas II. Land, which was discovered by Russian explorers traveling in ice breakers in September, 1913. They only observed the eastern and southern coasts of the land, which was found to extend to the north-northwest as a continuation of the eastern coasts of the Taimir peninsuit and the Chelyuskin peninsula.

TO PLANT CROSS AT POLE.

Gen. Nobile als. intends, if possible, to land at the pole, planting there a cross given him by Pope Pius.

He hopes to check on previous expeditions of Peary and MacMillan in polar regions. A companion of Gen. Nobile on his polar expeditions has been his dog Titiana, who seemed reluctant to leave Vadsoe, Norway, when the Italia left there for Spitsbergen, but finally decided to risk another adventure in the Arctic with his master.

Gen. Nobile is planning to use Vadsoe as an auxiliary base in the event that he should be forced south on one of his expeditions across the Arctic regions. He telegraphed to his representative there telling him to remain and prepare everything for mooring the airship in case of necessity.

MAKES OUT HIS WILL.

Before starting out today Gen. Nobile sent his will to Rome and it revealed that outside of his share of the $21,500 blanket policy on the Italia's crew and a $11,000 life policy on himself and his government pension that the general has no property of his own.

His estate is divided into three equal parts for his wife, daughter and niece.

proval of Senators Moses and Sackett to state that they held discussions both with Senator Goff and myself."

James W. Good, directing head of the Hoover organization, told the Senate campaign funds committee today the Washington headquarters of the commerce secretary had received contributions of $50,150 and spent $42,932.16.

Phillip P. Campbell, president of the "Curtis for President" Club, testified:

"We collected $590 spent $473 of it for stamps, literature, clerk hire," said Campbell.

"In what way are you attempting to influence the convention?"

"We are writing letters to delegates."

"Do you expect to expand your money-gathering operations?"

"Well, we will have to raise another $100 to pay all our expenses."

Good said that in his opinion the aggregate of expenditures of the various state Hoover clubs would be less than $250,000. Considering the scope of the campaign and the issues involved, he said, the expenditure was "very modest indeed," being "less than any similar campaign expenditure with which I am familiar."

He read into the record reports from various state campaign managers which showed not exceeding $30 in Rhode Island and $9267 in Massachusetts.

He was unable to give detailed information regarding some states, but said his information was that $35,000 or $40,000 had been expended in Indiana; "approximately $40,000" was spent in the Ohio campaign, and the New York Hoover committee had expenses around $35,000. Detailed reports, he said, were being awaited from Florida, Indiana, Maine, Missouri, New Hampshire, New York and Ohio.

Good testified receipts included $5000 from Edsel Ford and $2500 from Julius Rosenwald, Chicago merchant.

Those contributing $1000 included H. L. Bowles, Congressman from Massachusetts, and John H. Bartlett, assistant postmaster general.

HOOVER'S FATE UP TO PENN

Washington, May 11 (INS)—Pennsylvania, "Keystone State," appropriately enough holds an all-important key to the political future of Herbert Hoover.

Tomorrow the Republican bigwigs of Pennsylvania will hold a caucus and party conference in Philadelphia, at which the policy of Pennsylvania's 72 delegates to the Kansas City convention may be determined.

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, who thus far has remained silent concerning the candidacy of his cabinet colleague, will be present, and every political ear in Washington is already grounded to catch the vibrations of the gathering "if any."

The votes of Pennsylvania, or a good part of them, are vitally necessary to the nomination of Hoover. Figure as they will, Hoover managers cannot arrive at a table of reasonable expectations of more than 500 votes without help from Pennsylvania; and 945 are necessary to nominate.

At police headquarters the women were booked as Miss Martha Witten, also known to the police as Mayer, 28, of 128 Federal st., Providence; Mary Wakefield, 29, of Hammond st., Brookline, and Margaret O'Donnell, 24, of Elm st., Fryvidence.

NARROW GAUGE TRAIN WRECK

would not work. The train was running at nearly full speed at the time and the engineer worked desperately to slow down.

BRAKES DIDN'T HOLD.

The brakes shrieked and groaned but refused to take hold, and Tennett then whistled for the hand brakes. The attention of the passengers was attracted by the first whistle and when on looking from the windows they discovered the train was racing into the terminal instead of slowing down excitement became manifest.

Women screamed and fainted, and men ran to the end doors of the cars and began dropping off. Tennett again whistled for hand brakes, but the speed of the train continued unreduced, and something approaching a panic existed in the coaches. In the few minutes required to traverse the length of the terminal the exits of the cars became clogged with men, while the women and girls huddled in the seats or aisles.

The engineer and fireman stuck to their posts as long as there was a chance to bring the train to a stop, but when the engine struck the bumper at the end of the tracks, and plowed through it, Tennett and Warren jumped to safety.

With a farewell screech of its locked brakes, the engine slid over the edge of the wharf and dropped with a crash on to a cluster of piling which kept it from disappearing beneath the surface.

By a strange freak the tender remained on the wharf, but turned over on its left side. Behind it the eight cars came to a stop and the passengers who had clung to their seats made their shaky way to the wharf.

BRAKE VALVE DEFECTIVE

According to railroad men, the accident was due to a defective valve in the vacuum brakes, with which the engine was equipped.

The train pulled into the terminal on track 6, at the left of the ferry slips, and because of the location of the tracks there was no traffic tie-up. Until the engine and tender could be removed, the track was out of commission, however.

Henry W. Seward, head of the railroad and railway inspection division of the department of public utilities, immediately assigned Philip Scott, deputy inspector, to investigate the accident.

Watson Defeated Hoover by Over 23,000 Votes

Indianapolis, May 11—Senator James E. Watson defeated Herbert Hoover by 23,415 votes in the recent primary, according to figures completed here but not yet declared official.

"Eloping with the man she loves," Mrs. Alvina Sprogna, 20, mother of a three-year-old girl and wife of James Sprogna of Mountain ave., brought Revere's list of missing wives to seven today.

Her mother, Mrs. Louisa Sioico, with whom she made her home, and the distracted husband reported to the police today that the young wife had left a note written in Italian. Sprogna left his wife a week ago, following a family tiff, he said.

"I am all done. I am going to elope to New York with the man I love," the family interpreted the note.

She was described as a strikingly pretty brunette, weighing 120 pounds and five feet six inches tall.

WIFE CAUGHT WITH RARE SMILE

WIFE IN COURT PLEA FOR HER CHILDREN

Mother love and paternal affection laid their separate briefs for its custody of two little girls before Judge Chamberlain in Middlesex Probate Court today.

Openly sobbing, clasping and unclasping her hands, Mrs. Anna J. Quinlan of Somerville pleaded for her two children, Martha, 7, and Esther, 6, now in custody of their father, George J. B. Quinlan.

For five years, since her separation from her husband in 1922, her children have been with their father, Mrs. Quinlan testified. When their divorce suit was heard last year, she was ill at a hospital and had no home for the girls, she said.

Quinlan, in turn, sought to retain custody, declaring his children loved him and his mother and did not want to leave their present home. He did not contest divorce action, he said, because there was an agreement he was to have the children.

The court took under advisement Mrs. Quinlan's application for a modification of the divorce decree and custody of the girls, but granted her permission to visit them.

HERO WORSHIP LED ACTRESS TO DEATH

New York, May 11 (AP)—Three inference in death notes and clippings found in the room of Mrs. Jean Lebrun that she had committed suicide because of the death of Leonard W. Bonney, pioneer airman, and that he was her sweetheart, was termed by Bonney's widow only "hero adulation."

The notes left by Mrs. Lebrun said she was killing herself because her "sweetheart was killed in an aviation accident Friday."

A picture of Bonney and clippings tell of the fatal accident in which he died last Friday while testing his new plane, the Bonney Full, were found in the apartment.

"I'm thoroughly convinced he didn't know her," Mrs. Bonney, the former Flora McDonald, daughter of James A. McDonald, one-time associate of the late Senator William A. Clark of Montana, said. "I think it was the act of an insane woman."

She said she was sure it was a matter of idolizing from a distance. "For instance," she said, "could you blame Rudolph Valentino for all the silly women who killed themselves over his death?"

Mrs. Lebrun, a vaudeville actress, took her life by turning on the gas in the kitchen of her West 85th st. apartment. She was 33 years old and a daughter of the late Bishop John James Tigert of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Her maiden name was Amelia McTyeire Tigert and her home was in Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. John James Tigert of Washington, United States commissioner of education, and Dr. Holland Tigert of Nashville are brothers. She married Ernest Cooper of Shelbyville, Tenn., was divorced and it is said married again and divorced. Lebrun was said to be a stage name.

Baron Georgio Mario Suridni and Mildred Monettee, the toe dancer, are reunited in love after the baron's lapse when he became engaged to Winifred Barry, English actress. Miss Barry jilted him when he offered his title for sale. "I loved him first anyway," says Mildred.

LYNN GIRL SAYS SHE WAS PUSHED FROM CAR

Elsie Small, 17, of Haviland st., Lynn, is in the East Boston Relief Hospital suffering from injuries received in the mad scramble among 650 passengers when Narrow Gauge train crashed into bumper at the East Boston terminal. Rest of stories fell into the harbor.

WHITNEY HAD BRASS RAIL ON CAMP LIQUOR BAR

eagerly stepped over to read the message, as his attorney, Robert T. Bushnell, took it for inspection.

Mrs. Whitney's case rested after the telegram was introduced, much to the disappointment of spectators, who had hoped that Lawrence Higgins, with whom she is accused of infidelity by her husband, would appear as a witness. Rumors were in circulation that the wealthy young attache of the United States embassy in Mexico City, a Back Bay society bachelor, would be her last witness.

Mrs. Whitney's case constituted an effort to prove infidelity against her husband so that she might obtain a divorce, her suit being counter to her husband's, who also seeks divorce and custody of the two children.

MUSICAL STAR

Louise Groody, musical comedy star, who recently ended a Boston appearance, was named by a Meredith, N. H., youth as a more or less frequent visitor at the Whitney camp on Pine Island, Lake Winnipesaukee, a few years ago.

Her brother, Harris Groody, was in the courtroom today as a spectator.

Asked if Whitney had a bar on the porch of his cottage, the same witness, Clarence Lloyd Greenough, started the spectators laughing by saying:

"It looked like a soda fountain, but it had the characteristics of a liquor bar. It had a brass rail."

He said Whitney had a reputation around Meredith as "a heavy drinker," but that otherwise his reputation was good. He gave Mrs. Whitney, whose witness he was, an excellent reputation.

Detectives were put on as witnesses to attack the reputation of Mitchell Pallamary, detective-witness for Whitney, who had told of watching Mrs. Whitney and Lawrence Higgins "petting" in a taxicab and of finding them in her bed chamber in the Boston house on West Hill pl., Back Bay. One detective said he had discharged Pallamary for making false reports.

AT PPINE CAMP

Judge Mathews, by questions to lawyers at one point in the session, indicated that he was interested in the financial condition of Whitney. He asked about overdrafts reported on Whitney's acounts.

Clarence Lloyd Greenough, 29, of Meredith, N. H., testifying for Mrs. Whitney, said he knew the Whitneys for four years.

"I worked at the camp at Pine Island, where I took care of the boats, did general work, such as cutting grass, and served as chauffeur," he said.

"I lived on the island a short way from the house. In 1924, the first year, the family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Whitney, the children, the cook and butler and Nellie, the nurse."

Col. Jewett—Did the Whitneys have frequent visitors? —A. Yes.

Q.—Whom do you remember? A.—A man named Harrington, Miss Louise Groody and—

Q.—Do you remember a man named Torrey? A.—Yes.

The Louise Groody mentioned, attorneys explained during a recess of court, is the musical comedy actress now starring in "Hit the Deck."

Q.—What did you observe as to Mrs. Whitney's conduct? A.—It was very good. She was with the children a great deal and was careful of them.

Q.—What about Mr. Whitney's conduct, about his being away from home at times, and so on? A.—He used to be away week-ends, but usually came right back.

Q.—Did you notice in Mrs. Whitney anything indicating hostility toward her husband or ill-treatment of him? A.—No.

NO IMPROPRIETY

Q.—Did you ever see any impropriety on her part? A.—No.

Q.—Who was the most consistent visitor? A.—Harrington.

Q.—Did you ever see Mr. Lawrence Higgins there? A.—I don't seem to remember him.

Q.—Could Mrs. Whitney handle the boat herself? A.—Yes, sir.

Whitney owns the best speed boat on Lake Winnipesaukee, according to explanation by lawyers.

Q.—Mrs. Whitney also drove the auto herself? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you take any note of Mr. Whitney's conduct as regards language—was he profane? A.—Sometimes.

Q.—In the presence of his wife? A.—I never heard him use profanity in her presence.

Q.—There has been talk of a bar on the front porch of the cottage. Know anything about that? A.—I helped to put it up.

Liquor Bar

Q.—Describe it. A.—It looked like a soda fountain, but it had the characteristics of a liquor bar.

Spectators in the courtroom laughed at this answer.

Q.—Did it have a brass rail? A.—Yes, sir.

Col. Jewett—Even in the country, then, it certainly must have looked like a real bar.

Q.—Who was the most consistent visitor to the bar, Torrey or Harrington or who? A.—I would consider Mr. Harrington pretty handy. (There was another laugh.)

Q.—Do you remember any circumstances about a chicken? A.—Yes. I got the chicken in question; went over to the mainland and got a bag with two chickens.

Q.—See anything done with them? A.—No.

Q.—You didn't see them being given anything to drink? A.—No.

Q.—See them afterward? A.—Only one. I couldn't find the other.

Q.—What was it like? A.—Not as steady as it might be.

Mrs. Whitney has testified that her husband poured liquor down a hen's throat and then put the hen down to walk unsteadily to entertain his guests.

Q.—Do you know the reputation of Mr. Whitney in that vicinity? Was it good or not so good?

Wills Put In

Atty Bushnell objected, saying that the question must ask about his reputation as to truth, honesty or something specific like that. A recess was called.

The wills of Fred Edelbert Whitney and Arthur H. Whitney, uncle and father of Harold Whitney, were introduced as exhibits by Col. Jewett.

Howard W. Morgan, Allston st., West Medford, testified he is a private detective with a Boston office, the Morgan Detective Agency. His experience includes 26 years in Boston and service in all parts of the world, he said.

He said he was formerly associated with James R. Wood, head of the Wood Agency, whose operatives were employed by Whitney to watch his wife.

Questioning of this witness was bitterly opposed by Atty. Bushnell. Col. Jewett—Do you know Mitchell J. Pallamary? A.—Yes, sir.

Pallamary is the detective who accompanied Whitney on the visit to Mrs. Whitney's bed chamber when Lawrence Higgins was found there, according to testimony by him, Whitney and others.

EMPLOYED HIM

Q.—How long have you known him? A.—Since 1918. Q.—Ever in your employ? A.—Yes. Q.—How long? A.—Two years, 1919 to 1921, as an officer to shadow and investigate.

Q.—What is his general reputation as to truth and reputation, as far as you know? A.—Very bad.

The witness added he had "heard of his reputation every day."

Atty. Bushnell, in cross-examination:

Q.—How long? For the last 20 years? A.—No, sir.

Q.—How many years A.—During the entire time he was in my employ.

Q.—Only two years, then? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Do you purport to know his reputation for truth and veracity in the community in which he resides? A.—I do not even know where he resides.

Q.—Know any other operatives Mr. Wood employs whose reputations for truth and veracity are bad? A.—I do not.

Q.—Now, as a matter of fact, you had trouble with Pallamary, didn't you? A.—He made false reports to me and I discharged him. That's the trouble I had.

Pallamary had denied being discharged under such circumstances.

Q.—You went to Wood to get Wood to discharge Pallamary, didn't you? A.—No.

Morgan admitted next that he used the name of Howard many times. He said he had heard others of his employes discuss Pallamary's reputation. He said the others were not rivals, but fellow-workmen.

Q.—Did you investigate Pallamary for this particular case? A.—No.

William Tasker, Madison st., Somerville, employed by the Morris Wolf secret service, testified next. He said he worked with the Pinkertons years ago and had been with the William J. Burns agency as manager.

He said he had worked with Pallamary.

"When I knew him his reputation for truth and veracity was not so good," he testified.

Both detectives stated that they would not believe Pallamary under oath "as quick as other persons."

Ocean's Bottom Off N. H. to Be Found by Echo

Washington, May 11 (AP)—Ocean depths off the coast of New Hampshire will be plumbed over a wide area by the Coast and Geodetic Survey this summer in an endeavor to fix a safe maneuvering ground for Navy submarines.

By the survey the Navy hopes to map the underwaters near the Portsmouth naval base so that they can be navigated as safely by submerged vessels as by surface craft.

Director Jones of the survey, announcing the program today, said the survey ship Lydonia had been assigned to the work with echo sounding apparatus. The echo sounders produce a series of rape close to the surface which are echoed back from the bottom and the depth established by the length of time the soundwaves consume in making their round trip.

READING PROBE ADJOURNED TO MONDAY

Because no defense witnesses were present to go on, the legislative hearing of Atty-Gen. Reading's conduct of office adjourned at an early hour today with every indication the investigation would conclude early next week.

Excluding the attorney general, who is expected to be in condition to resume testimony under cross-examination, Reading's counsel will call three more witnesses on the stand. Their examination is not expected to take more than a day.

President Wilson of the Decimo club will testify Monday. It is said to have Wilmot A. Nash and a Decimo officer named Hillman also on hand. Hillman came to Boston from New York a short time ago to testify, but was taken ill and forced to return home.

MAINE MAN ON STAND

S. Arthur Paul of Portland, Me., was the only witness today. Paul is an attorney and a director of the Acceptance Corporation of Maine, formerly the Maine L. A. W.

Paul said about $750,000 worth of stock had been sold in the Maine subsidiary. He told of the Maine officers bearing in September for the first time of the apparent overcharges by United L. A. W. and of a demand which the Maine corporation made for an accounting.

READING "LOGICAL" MAN.

He testified regarding the two meetings of subsidiary representatives in the City Club, October 26 and November 4. At the second it was decided Reading should try to effect a settlement.

"He appeared to be the most logical counsel to employ," said Paul. He denied emphatically anything had been said about "employing the attorney-general" or Reading having more influence than anybody else.

In addition to the $125,000 paid by the United under the settlement, $60,000 was paid the Maine subsidiary and other small accounts to one or two other companies. Wolfe was perfectly satisfied with the settlement, Paul testified.

NO COMPLAINT MADE.

A week after the settlement Attorney Gaskill, representing Wolfe's control in the L. A. W., approached the subsidiaries' committee of seven with a proposition to sell the Worcester United to the parent corporation which the subsidiaries were about to organize, Paul said.

Under cross-examination by Hammond, Paul said everybody conceded there had been a misappropriation of funds. He admitted the term "attempted larceny" might have been used.

12 Who Drifted to Sea on Ice Floe Found on Island

St. Johns, N. F., May 11 (INS)—Twelve men who drifted out to sea Monday on an ice floe have been located on Gulls Island by the steamship Kyle which conducted a search for them.

The men were members of a party of 16 hunting seals when the ice on which they were broke away from the shore. Four escaped, but the fate of the others was in doubt until their rescue was reported by the Kyle.

JAPS TAKE CITY; BEAT CHINESE OFF 10 TIMES

Tokio, May 11—Japanese troops captured the entire walled city of Tsinan, the War Office announced today.

The remnants of Gen. Feng's Chinese soldiers that resisted Japanese occupation fled through the rear gate following a last desperate but unsuccessful counter-attack.

The War Office stated that, as the Japanese objective at Tsinan has now been fully attained, no further fighting between Japanese and Chinese troops is expected.

Large numbers of Chinese were taken prisoners.

Fighting was in progress throughout the night. A dispatch said that the Japanese entered the walled city (the native quarter) at midnight after a furious assault in which artillery and machine guns were used.

The Japanese held their positions despite 10 violent counter-attacks.

The railroad authorities have been ordered to prepare for transporting 20,000 men and 3350 horses to Shantung, China, between next Sunday and the end of the month. This will bring the total Japanese forces in Shantung to about 28,000 men.

Shanghai, May 11—Mrs. William T. Hobart of the American Methodist mission at Taianfu, near Tsinan, was killed on April 29 by a bullet fired through a window in her bedroom from an opposite wall during fighting between the National ists and Northerners.

Mrs. Hobart was 65, and was born at Flushing, L. I. Her husband and she have been missionaries in China since 1882. Both were graduates of Northwestern University.

They have four children, two sons living at Evanston, Ill., and two daughters are in the missionary service in foreign fields.

Japanese residents of Canton were evacuated to Shameen, the foreign settlement, and Hongkong. A strong anti-Japanese boycott was under way in Canton.

Only five Americans were believed to be in Tsinan, including two American consuls—Edwin F. Stanton and Ernest R. Price of Foochow.

Dr. C. C. Wu, former foreign minister of the Nanking Nationalist government, has been asked to go to Washington to place the Shantung situation before the American government.

Easy to reach from all parts of Boston. Only 6 minutes' ride from Park St. subway.

KNAPP JUROR IS FOUND GUILTY

Albany, May 11 (AP)—David H. Main, the juror who led the fight for the acquittal of Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, former Secretary of State, recently tried on an indictment charging grand larceny of State census funds on which the jury was not able to agree, was found guilty of contempt of court by Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan today.

Justice Callaghan permitted Main to leave the court without punishment.

The juryman was charged with having deceived the court in regard to acquaintanceship with Libel, Atty. Charles J. Herrick and with basing his arguments in the jury room on matters that had not been introduced as evidence.

SEEK MISSING BROKER AS SWINDLER SUSPECT

Hartford, Ct., May 10 (AP)—The search for Roger M. Investigation has disclosed that Watkins has operated under several aliases in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Tennessee for the last seven years.

SUES BEAUTY DOCTOR IN $200,000 FOR LOSS OF LEGS

Chicago, May 11 (AP)—Miss Sadia Holland, whose legs were amputated above the knees after a "beauty" operation, has filed a $200,000 suit against Dr. Henry J. Schireson, Chicago plastic surgeon.

The declaration of the suit sets forth on Sept. 30, 1927, the plaintiff went to Dr. Schireson for treatment of a sore on her arm. The doctor told her that her legs were slightly "bowed" and that he could easily straighten them, her complaint said. The document further states that on Jan. 14 she paid the doctor $300 for the operation.

FAMILY SAVED FROM FIRE BY DOG'S BARK

Brockton, May 11—The barking of a dog early today saved the lives of several persons as flames swept the Waste Paper Stock Co., of Harry M. Jenness, on South Layden st., destroying also his garage and setting fire to dwelling-houses on either side.

Hero of the fire was City Marshal Herbert Boyden, who dashed into the blazing home of Williiam Curtis, South Layden st. and carried one-year-old Dorothy Curtis to safety. The baby is suffering from bronchial pneumonia, and shelter was found for her in the home of a neighbor, James Snow. It was the Curtis dog that gave the alarm.

Firemen managed to save Jenness' auto truck by rolling it out of the garage, but two other machines were lost. Jenness estimated his loss at $25,000. The adjoining houses were saved.

Hand of Foley Is Forced by Fuller

ing considerable interest in the proceedings.

WHY STATE POLICE ARE OUT

It was learned the reason why the State forces were withdrawn from the original Boston rum investigation of two years ago, was because a sergeant of the State police was detained at a police station following a struggle with a prisoner. The sergeant, it was learned, was told no Boston policeman would arrest the man in question, so did it himself, taking his prisoner to the station. There the man struck his captor, who proceeded to knock the prisoner "cold." Much to the State police sergeant's surprise, he was arrested by the local police.

A report was later made to Gen. Foote, who informed the then district attorney if that was the type of co-operation he offered, he could do his own investigating. With that the State police were withdrawn.

GOVERNOR TAKES HAND.

The beginning of presentation of evidence to the jury was delayed by the presence of Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle in another session of court, but the delay was expected to be only a matter of a few hours.

While District Attorney Foley has expressed nothing but pleasure in the fact that Governor Fuller has interested himself so intensely in Foley's investigation of the rum and vice graft ring, those closest to the district attorney believe that the intervention of the Governor and State Police is forcing the county prosecutor to act differently than he planned.

The district attorney did not wish to bring a general investigation of vice, rum and graft before the grand jury, but wished to limit himself to the one specific case of the South End hotel man whom the ring is alleged to have tried to "shake down" after he already had paid $85,000 for "protection."

The district attorney was and is confident that he has sufficient evidence to warrant the grand jury returning indictments against the five men he believes members of the notorious ring. With the indictment of these men he believed that he would have made a beginning, and with their arrest as basis he could start a real "clean-up campaign."

SWAMPED WITH HINTS

But the intervention of the State police, and the introduction into the case of the evidence secured by their investigation which has been going on for months, so widens the case that if the district attorney is forced to bring all these somewhat vague charges before the grand jury there is danger that the main issue, the South End hotel man, will be lost in a maze of extraneous evidence.

There is no secret in the district attorney's office of the fact that if he had carried out his own plans the case of the hotel man and the graft ring would have been placed before the grand jury long since.

The district attorney is daily swamped with hints, charges and information, which, though useful in a general anti-vice campaign, have nothing whatever to do with the specific case of the South End hotel man, and will only serve to confuse the grand jury if they are presented to that body.

GIVEN CLEAN BILL

From the State House comes the cry against one patrolman attached to police headquarters whose style of living is not at all commensurate with his salary of less than $40 a week.

Those closest to Foley know that the district attorney believes he has this man enmeshed in the net he has woven about the other members of the alleged graft ring. But he had intended to deal with this man's actions solely in regard to his connection with the ring, forgetting for the time being all about his shore estate, his automobiles, and his race horse.

As a matter of fact this man long ago was questioned by his superiors in the police department on the very features now sent out from the State police headquarters.

He had been given a clean bill of health by said superiors when he convinced them that the money necessary for such a scale of living was not his but his wife's, she having been left a legacy and pyramiding this money by shrewd real estate and business investments.

Again from the State House comes the hue and cry concerning a member of the Legislature, a lawyer and Republican leader, being charged with attempting to obtain from a judge the release of two women, proprietors of disorderly houses, sentenced to Sherborn by this judge.

Again, point out those working with Dist. Atty. Foley, a matter worthy of investigation but miles removed from the case of the South End hotel man and the ring charged with trying to "shake him down."

The district attorney has his South End case all prepared for the grand jury, and can go before that body at any time now with that specific case, but those working with him believe that if he is forced into bringing a general anti-vice investigation before that body he may not take the necessary steps for some time.

Among the army of witnesses who have crowded the district attorney's office since the announcement of his probe, consisting for the most part of disgruntled bootleggers and others of like ilk or worse, one appeared who gave the probers something other than vague generalities.

DECIDED TO GET OUT

This is a West End pawnbroker, who early saw the possibilities of real money in bootlegging on a large scale. He did not start on a "shoestring," but had money, and quickly made of himself something of a power among the bootlegging fraternity.

This continued until, like the South End hotel man, he decided that he was paying so much money for protection that he was "working for the grafters not for himself," and he got out of the illicit business.

The difference between this man and the petty bootleggers who have flocked to the district attorney's office, or sent letters, is just here.

This man was a keen business man and had invested much money in his illicit traffic. He refused to hand out money to some "bagman," who talked vaguely of captains and lieutenants and sergeants and men higher in the police department. He demanded to know just where his money was going and what he was to receive for it.

His insistence was partly the cause of his quitting the business, for the grafters with whom he dealt would not allow themselves to be personally implicated unless "big money" was involved.

SENATOR KEYES NAMED TO FINANCE COMMITTEE

Washington, May 11—Senator Henry W. Keyes of New Hampshire, was named to a place on the Senate finance committee, which is the committee of the upper branch which handles revenue legislation, and the importance is comparable to the ways and means committee of the House.

Memberships on the finance committee are rated as a much coveted honor in the Senate. Senator Walsh of Massachusetts is one of the Democratic members of the committee.

with these amazing new "beads" of soap

HERE'S an astonishing new soap for washing dishes. A soap that does the work easier . . . quicker . . . better than any you have ever used before.

It's called Super Suds, and it's not a chip . . . not a powder . . . but a remarkable new form of soap made in tiny thin-walled "beads"—so thin they burst into suds the instant they strike water!

Super Suds dissolves instantly . . . rinses completely . . . that is why it does the work faster and better than any other soap you've ever known.

Just phone your grocer and ask him to send a box today. Try it in your dishpan once . . . you'll never be without it again.

Biggest box of soap on the market for,

The Arnold Arboretum is to have its first public walk of the season on Sunday. As heretofore, George M. Merrill will conduct the walk which will start from the Forest Hills gate at 3 p. m., weather permitting.

STUDENT-POET FREED TO FOIL 'MARTYRDOM'

New York, May 11 (AP)—David Gordon, 19-year-old University of Wisconsin student, who was serving an indeterminate reformatory sentence for writing an improper poem, today was free to resume his studies. He is the holder of the Zona Gale scholarship at the Wisconsin school.

The New York parole commission paroled Gordon for the duration of his sentence, which was for a period up to three years, and provided that the monthly report could be made by mail so that he can resume his studies at Wisconsin. He had already served 45 days of his sentence in the reformatory at New Hampton, N. Y.

"To take drastic action against Gordon," the commission's report said, "would, in our opinion, only serve to add further to his already exaggerated self-esteem and to make a martyr of an immature and inconsequential youth who has been guilty of writing a very bad and vulgar piece of 'poetry.'"

The poem, for which Gordon was tried and convicted under the Comstock law governing the publication of objectionable matter, was published in the Daily Worker, a New York daily, and was called "America."

The poem railed at the United States and the Statue of Liberty in what the court considered improper language. Gordon's defense was that he had used the bad language in a metaphorical sense and did not mean to give offense.

HUB COMBINE BUYS 11 RHODE ISLAND ICE FIRMS

Operating under a declaration of trust filed in Boston, a group of business men, known as the National Service Companies, today added 11 Rhode Island ice companies with combined assets of $2,500,000 to an organization already controlling ice companies in Boston, Portland, Me., Lawrence, Westchester County, N. Y., and three Indiana cities. The additions include the Providence Ice Company. This concern, with the 10 others, were purchased by the Rhode Island Ice Company, which then sold a majority interest to the Boston organization, of which it was disclosed, Edward L. Bennett is president and Howard H. Davenport chairman of the board. First mortgage bonds of the Rhode Island Ice Company amounting to $1,500,000 will be offered for sale.

Bridge Battle Opens at Card Table and Ends in Court

Los Angeles, May 11 (AP)—Bridge players knew this was certain to happen some time.

Mrs. Gena Robinson, according to testimony in Superior Court here in the trial of the suit brought against her by Mrs. Lyon, finessed her partner's spade lead. Mrs. Lyon was the partner.

Then the battle started. A battle of words was waged until the hand was played.

"Then she jumped up and I pushed her back," testified Mrs. Robinson. Mrs. Lyon declared her face was cut by the diamonds on Mrs. Robinson's fingers. So she sued for $21,010 damages.

The court agreed it probably was more than a push and awarded Mrs. Lyon $300.

SENATE PASSES 4-HOUR SATURDAY POSTAL BILL

A four-hour working day on Saturdays for postal employes is provided in a bill passed by the Senate and sent to the House.

Postal clerks working at night would receive a 10 per cent bonus under a House bill passed by the Senate and sent to the President.

HAIL LANDING OF BLIMP ON SHIP AS SUCCESS

New York, May 11 (AP)—The first landing of an airship on the deck of a moving steamer, accomplished off Ambrose lightship, was hailed by shipping men today as demonstrating the feasibility of a shore-to-ship service to speed transatlantic travel.

The army non-rigid dirigible TC-3 effected the landing on a specially constructed platform on the United States Shipping Board liner American Trader while the ship proceeded on its way to Plymouth and London at a speed of six knots an hour.

The dirigible remained on the steamer's deck three minutes, while letters were delivered and a passenger picked up, and then cast off again and returned to her planer at Lakehurst, N. J. The test was conducted by the army and U. S. Shipping Board and was participated in by Paramount News and the Associated Press photographers.

T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board, was elated.

TICKETS READY FOR FLIERS' RECEPTION

The rush was on today to get tickets for the reception and dinner to the Bremen fliers, at the Copley-Plaza Hotel on the night of May 20, under the auspices of Irish and German organizations in Boston. Tickets have been printed for about 1200 diners.

The attendance will be about divided between memberships of the German and of the Irish organizations, it is announced.

Among the speakers at the banquet will be Governor Fuller, Mayor Nichols, the Irish minister, German consul-general, former Mayor Curley, former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, the Rev. Philip J. O'Donnell, Frank Bieberlich and Francis E. Slattery. Other speakers will be announced later.

The committee on arrangements will also include District Attorney Foley, Mayor Quinn of Cambridge, Sebastian Gahm, Max Otto von Cluck, Jr., Miss Mary Dierkes, John J. Curley, August Boecher, Carl Weits and Mark Mulvey.

LINDY IN SECRET LANDING AFTER MYSTERY HOP

New York, May 11 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's latest secret flight caused many telephone lines to flying fields to be busy early today.

With his navigation instructor, Lieut-Comdr. P. V. H. Weems, the colonel left the Ford Airport, Detroit, yesterday at 2 p. m., Detroit time. His destination was kept secret. He arrived at Curtiss Field, L. I., at 8:30 p. m., Daylight time, but it was not afterward his whereabouts was a mystery.

There were various conjectures, ranging from a theory that he was making an intensive study of navigation by the stars, to suggestions that he might have been forced down.

Long after midnight denial was made at Curtiss Field that he had arrived there. This caused inquiries to every flying field at which he might have stopped en route and even at cities not on the route.

Lindbergh conferred in Detroit with Henry and Edsel Ford and their chief engineers, William B. Mayo, presumably in regard to some aerial adventure he has in mind. The Fords were informed of his destination, but long after he had reached Long Island the Ford airport lacked the customary acknowledgment of the safe arrival of one who leaves a flying field. This prompted the Ford people to make known the fact that the colonel's destination was New York.

EXPECT COOLIDGE TO VETO FARM RELIEF BILL

Washington, May 11 (AP)—McNary-Haugen farm relief or nothing seems to be the situation facing Congress and President Coolidge as the legislative date for adjournment draws nearer.

While both the Senate and the House passed the measure, there is a difference in requiring concurrence. The first conference yesterday failed to bring a settlement.

Senator McNary, Republican, Oregon, co-author of the bill and manager of the conferees, is demanding an early decision on the final forms of the bill, but he admitted after the first meeting that several days probably will be required to get the measure down to the White House. There is little doubt in the minds of congressional leaders that the President again will veto the bill.

KENNY IS THE BOY TO CHIP IN FOR AL SMITH

New York, May 11 (AP)—A friendship of 35 years that started when both were boys on New York's lower East Side attracted attention today owing to the revelation that William F. Kenny contributed $20,000 and loaned $50,000 more to Governor Alfred E. Smith's campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Kenny, after a varied career in Texas as a cowboy and a railroad worker, returned to New York to accumulate a fortune as a contractor. He never has been active in politics.

WHAT SMITH SAYS

Testimony before the Senate campaign fund investigating committee by George R. Van Namee, Governor Smith's pre-convention campaign manager, of Kenny's contributions caused no surprise among the friends of the two men.

The Governor, speaking of his friendship with Kenny, recently said: "There is nothing in the world that Bill Kenny wouldn't do for me. Why, Bill Kenny would take his shirt off for me, if there was any call for it."

Kenny, at one time discussing his relationship with the Governor, said:

WHAT KENNY SAYS.

"I count my warm friendship with Al Smith as one of the most happy events in my career. But my relationship with him goes no further than that. He does not ask me for advice. I do not offer any. The Governor's private and political life is an open book. Anybody can read it. The Governor is a most remarkable man. He does not need an adviser."

Kenny's father was a battalion chief in the fire department and a hero to the youthful Al Smith, whose father was a truckman. The two boys were constant companions in and out of the firehouse.

RAN AWAY FROM HOME.

Young Kenny ran away from home and Smith stayed in New York and went into politics, but the two never lost touch.

Returning to New York in 1898, Kenny was married to Miss Mary E. Hickey, and with $2.40 in the treasury they started housekeeping. Friends of Smith suggest that when Smith was married soon after, his financial status probably was little better.

In time Kenny built up a contracting business described as one of the biggest in the state, with an annual turnover estimated at around $40,000,000. His fortune is said to be in the vicinity of $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.

TWO USES FOR MONEY.

A small, plump man, who retains his boyhood frailty for firemen and the atmosphere of the firehouse, he loves to gather about him a small group of kindred spirits for an informal beefsteak dinner in his "tiger room," which takes up most of two stories in a 23rd st. office building. The governor has been his guest frequently in a private railroad car for trips to golf courses.

Kenny's philosophy is expressed in his own words:

"Money is useful for just two things. One is to provide for family needs, and the other is to use it to entertain friends. That is what I do with mine."

ANTI-SMITH DELEGATES WINNERS IN ALABAMA

Birmingham, Ala., May 11 (AP)—Decisive majorities piled up by three anti-Smith candidates for delegates-at-large to the Houston convention appeared today to have determined definitely the tenor of most of Alabama's 24 votes.

Daytona Beach, Fla., May 11 (AP)—Following a split in the Republican State convention here yesterday, rival leaders announced that two separate delegations would be sent to Kansas City.

Lieut. Thomas, Crash Victim, First to Fly in Grand Canyon

Lincoln, Neb., May 11 (AP)—Lieut. Royal V. Thomas, aviator, who met death Wednesday near Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., when his monoplane, Reliance, crashed during a test flight, was the first and only aviator to fly an airplane to the bottom of the Grand Canyon of Arizona—a mile below the surface of the earth.

On August 8, 1922, Thomas dropped out over the rim of the gigantic canyon in Arizona, unaccompanied.

Out over the rim and into the treacherous air currents of that big gap in the earth—10 to 20 miles wide and a mile deep Thomas piloted his plane.

Brooklyn, May 11—Several women politicians are wearing brown derbies. One guess as to whom they favor for President.

GIRL IS SHOT IN REHEARSAL OF SCHOOL PLAY

Burlington, Vt., May 11 (AP)—The condition of Miss Doris Doty, Johnson high school senior, who was brought to a hospital with a bullet wound in her side, was reported by hospital authorities today as much improved and unless complications set in her recovery is now looked for.

Miss Doty was accidentally shot during the rehearsal of a high school play at Johnson. During the play there is supposed to be some shooting, and Harry Stewart, one of the characters, picked up a revolver, supposedly containing blank cartridges.

In some mysterious way a loaded cartridge had been placed in the gun and Miss Doty was wounded when it was discharged during rehearsal.

GOODWIN GIVES MOTHERS ADVICE ON SAFETY

WARNS OF HIGHWAY PERILS

Unfortunately it is impossible for the average mother to visualize the danger until tragedy is brought home to her. The safety campaign now being conducted by the Boston Evening American is for the purpose of making it possible for the mother to visualize what may happen to her own child, unless she can impress upon that child the necessity for exercising the greatest care every time it goes on the street.

If every mother and every school teacher could sit in the office of the registrar of motor vehicles and hear the sad stories there unfolded, a greater necessity would be brought home to them for the constant preaching of safety.

They would be brought into contact with the agony and suffering that saddens thousands of our homes.

A FATHER'S SAD TALE

Let me take the mothers and teachers into the registrar's office for a moment. I am sitting at my desk when the next visitor is announced. A man walks in the door, followed by a sad-faced woman.

I noticed something in the man's hand as he walks toward my desk. His expression is grim. I recognize him as a man I had known eight years before. I salute him as a friend. He makes no answer. He walks straight toward me. He threw something on my desk, exclaiming:

"That's all that's left of him!"

I saw a small blue stocking cap lying on the desk before me. Glancing up I ask him what it means. Meanwhile the woman bursts into tears and covers her face with her hands. There is a moment of tense silence.

"Didn't you know my little boy was killed by a crazy driver?" the father asked, his voice trembling.

"No," I replied, "I didn't know about it. We have so many, I cannot keep track of them."

"Yes," he said, "he was killed last week. The only child we had. He was seven. It has ruined our whole life. The driver got out of it in court. What are you going to do with him?"

If every man in Massachusetts who drives an automobile could have been present at that scene, there would be less children killed and maimed in the coming year.

The picture painted above has its lesson for the driver. Let me tell of an incident that has its lesson for the mother.

The next visitor is announced. A young woman about thirty years of age, entered and took a seat near my desk. She was dressed in black.

"What have you done to the man who killed my baby?" she asked.

The secretary brought in the papers. I told her the operator's license had been revoked.

She reached for her handbag, and with trembling fingers took from it the photograph of a beautiful girl, four years of age. She passed the picture to me and insisted upon telling the story of the accident. She said:

"I live on the second floor overlooking a square. I was at my window watching for my little boy, who is six, coming from school. The school is directly opposite. Down in front of our house was my little girl. She, too, was watching for her brother.

MOTHERS' RESPONSIBILITY

"The children came trooping out of school, and when my little girl saw her brother among those on the other side, she started to run across the street to greet him.

"Just then a coal truck came along. I frantically called to my little girl from the window, trying to stop her, but the truck rolled on and crushed her to death before my very eyes."

The one thought that has always impressed me is that the most important thing to prevent accidents to children on our highways is for the mother to make the last impression upon the mind of the child before it goes to school—a lesson in safety.

And likewise for the teacher to make the last lesson before the child leaves the school—a safety lesson.

I find in today's mail a splendid tribute from Dr. Jeremiah E. Burke, superintendent of Boston public schools. With wonderful clarity and brevity, Superintendent Burke expresses the vital thought which I have just emphasized. Dr. Burke's letter follows:

Editor of the Boston Evening American:

To the homes of the people we look for whatever is most fruitful in education. The mother in the home is unmistakably the greatest of teachers.

We in the schools are doing our utmost to protect the safety and lives of children, but our efforts are quite ineffectual unless we secure the hearty co-operation of the homes.

The American deserves congratulations, therefore, upon its efforts to unify the various agencies that are concerned with the welfare of our children, thereby promoting the happiness of all our citizens.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) Jeremiah E. Burke,
Superintendent of Public Schools.

The Highway Safety Editor would welcome first-hand stories from mothers whose children were killed or injured by automobiles, or those children were struck and escaped injury, in order that actual cases may serve as object lessons. Describe how such accidents happened in sending in your code of Mothers' Safety Don'ts.

$150.00 Offered for Safety Don'ts

The Boston Evening American is offering 73 cash prizes for the most effective sets of ten "Mothers' Safety Don'ts" to guard children from the auto peril.

The first prize will be $50, second $15, third $10 and there will be 75 one dollar prizes.

Awards will be made on common sense, practical views, rather than for literary effort.

The judges are Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, wife of the governor; Capt. George A. Parker, registrar of motor vehicles, Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson and Assistant Superintendent Augustine L. Rafter of the Boston public schools.

Kindly write your "Don'ts" on a separate sheet, using one side of the paper. In your letter state number of children and ages. Write legibly and include name and address. Direct letters to Editor Mothers' Safety Don'ts, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

Write early. Remember the contest is already under way. We want to hear from all the mothers.

BETTY ALDEN NOTES THAT MANY HUB FOLK ARE ON WAY TO EUROPE

Several Have Taken Passage on Liner Paris Sailing From New York

FOR REASONS OF STATE OR reasons of business to honeymoon perhaps or because life as lived in Rome or Paris is alluring, or merely for the love of going somewhere, do Bostonians of prominence and importance go abroad. Consider the Boston colorie sailing tonight on the liner Paris from New York. Observe names of the social great ones, off for some favorite playground in the Old World. In numbers do they go aboard the Paris this evening for one of the cutteringly elaborate after midnight sailings that give to bon voyage a bit of the bizarre.

THE PASSENGER LIST OF THE Paris scintillates with names such as Haughton, Grew, Phillips, Whitwell, Bohlen and the like. Randolph C. Grew and the tall and tremendously good to look upon Mrs Grew would in themselves sufficiently ornament the most select list of the most majestic liner. They sned added lustre on the sailing, however, since they are Boston's most paragraphed newlyweds, just off on a four-month honeymoon journey. Mrs. Grew's gowns will be the subject of much discussion and envy on board, no doubt, and Mrs. Grew's gowns will be worth looking at. And, of course, the Grews will be among the foreign folk and notables at the most social of the great ships.

THE PHILLIPS WHITWELLS sailed on the Berengaria last week. Jessie Whitwell will be presented at court next winter. Mrs. Whitwell is the former Jessie Lee and is a granddaughter of Dr. Francis Lee. The Whitwells are living in Cohasset.

MRS. GRAEME HAMILTON WITH her daughter, A. D. Lyons of North Shore and Palm Beach are doing Paris. The Hamiltons have been for the Easter season at the Ritz-Carlton and have been joined by Mrs. Lyons and her daughter. Mrs. Hamilton will be remembered as Miss Alice Bowditch. Mrs. Lyons was the former Miss Dorothy Lee, daughter of Dr. Francis Lee.

WILKINS QUITS POLAR REGION

Green Harbor, Spitzbergen, May 11 (AP)—Capt. George H. Wilkins and Lieut. Carl B. Eielson, who flew across the top of the world seven weeks ago to Spitzbergen today changed their plans and sped southward to Teller, Alaska. The two aviators left Green Harbor just before midnight in the Fokker they had flown across the Arctic ice cap.

The departure of the two aviators from Green Harbor was a surprise to everyone, as it was not expected that they would leave for Alaska before Monday or Tuesday. When they left Green Harbor they had enough gasoline aboard their plane to carry them to Point Barrow, Alaska, but they expected to refuel at Teller.

Wilkins and Eielson landed at Green Harbor on a mission of mercy. They had been informed by radio that Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, famous Norwegian explorer, was dangerously ill at Green Harbor, and they had flown there to take him to a hospital at Tromsoe, Norway. Dr. Nansen, however, died before the plane arrived.

GERMAN FLIERS SEE CHICAGO

Chicago, May 11 (AP)—Chicago gave homage to the Bremen fliers today. The program was to start at 1 p. m., with the mayor host to the fliers at the South Shore country club. After the luncheon there was a tour of the city arranged, following which the airmen were to be home guests of the German consul, Dr. Hugo Simons, for the evening.

Aboard a train from New York arriving today were the wives of Capt. Koehl and Maj. Fitzmaurice as well as Prof. Hugo Junkers, builder of the Bremen and the Ju 33 and T. A. Smiddy, minister to Washington from the Irish Free State.

Tomorrow will be "Der Tag" as far as the public is concerned. Soldier Field will provide space enough for more than 100,000 persons to participate in the welcome. A parade in which elaborate floats will follow one another for a mile or more will preface the formal ceremonies. A banquet to the 4500 persons as guests will bring to a climax the Chicago welcome Saturday night.

FORMER MAYOR PETERS UNDERGOES OPERATION

Former Mayor Andrew P. Peters, mentioned as the next Democratic candidate for governor, underwent a major operation at the Palmer House Missal Sisters General Hospital and is reported doing very well.

The former Mayor was seriously injured last Friday when thrown from his horse, and a recurrence of this old injury necessitated his visit to the operating room.

Dog, Gone 2 Years, Comes Back as Master Dies

New Bedford, May 11 (AP)—Five hour after his master's death, Duke, an Irish terrier missing from home two years, came to the door and sought admittance. Duke belonged to Police Chief William T. Cole, whose funeral will be conducted tomorrow.

Why he disappeared no one knows. What led him home on the day of his master's death no one has tried to guess. He went to the door that Chief Cole used to open for him as though he had not been gone an hour.

No one in the family has doubted the dog's identity, which he has proved by going through the familiar tricks his dead master taught him.

TRAIN WRECKER TWICE FOILED IN WALTHAM

Two attempts to wreck the Boston-to-Hudson train over the Boston & Maine line in Waltham were reported to the police today.

Both attempts took place in dark nese, in the vicinity of Lyon-a pond trestle, the first occurring when a heavy plank was placed across the tracks. The engine wheels broke the plank without difficulty, but a short distance further along crashed into a railroad tie which was dragged across the trestle.

The train continued on its way unaltered, but a short time later Harry J. Cain of Blake st, reported two roughly dressed men attempted to hold him up as he drove through Lexington ave. Cain said the men were armed.

BELLEVUE CHEF GIVES LESSON AT LEE KITCHEN

Pastry better than the kind that most mothers are dreamed of was the feature of a lesson in practical cookery given by Mr. Stephen Zaborowski, pastry chef of the Hotel Bellevue, in the Martha Lee Kitchen yesterday afternoon. Housewives who confessed they had always despaired of making toothsome Danish pastry saw the simple secrets of its making finally revealed. The how and why of the delicious French cookies served at the Hotel Bellevue was also divulged by Mr Zaborowski.

S. Zaborowski

Then there was an open fruit pie and a cream custard tart, guaranteed to please the most critical taste. And a good old-fashioned graham pudding that would convince grandma that the present generation is as practical as it is efficient.

Next Wednesday there'll be another special treat, scheduled for Chef's Day, so watch for announcements in this paper next Monday.

Missing Flier Found

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 11 (AP)—A telephone message to the Gazette-Telegraph this morning said Lieut. Eddie Eschleman, missing air mail pilot, had been located at Hilltop, near Elizabeth, Colo., where he was forced down by fog.

LAYS BAD MEAT LAXITY TO POOR PAY BY STATE

Urging federal control of slaughter houses in the state, Dr. George H. Bigelow, state commissioner of health, today told the house committee on ways that special meat agents to the consumer under state supervised inspectors.

He urged favorable action on a bill before the committee providing slaughtering in houses approved by federal meat police. He attributed the cause to the small compensation provided inspectors by the state, causing disinterest in their work.

Dr. Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, health commissioner of Boston, and Rep. Daniel J. Coakley of Chicopee also spoke for federal control.

JOHN JACKSON CLAIMS LOST DISCHARGE PAPERS

When John Jackson, 80, living at the Old People's Home, Roxbury, read in the Boston Evening American that honorable discharge papers from the United States Army, dated 58 years ago had been found in the street, he called up Mayor Curley, Preston Brown of the Army Base and claimed them. Jackson served on the Western frontier in 1867-69, and lost his discharge papers on a down town trip.

FULLER DOESN'T WARM UP TO MAYOR'S LETTER

Governor Fuller today refused to make any comment on the letter sent him by Mayor Curley urging action be taken on the "L" situation at this session if the Legislature, beyond intimating the mayor has offered nothing new.

He showed nonchalance on the communication, which said the mayor had forwarded "L" legislation to the General Court a month ago. The Legislature rejected that with other plans for the road's future disposition.

METHODISTS NAME 37 TO STUDY CHURCH UNION

Kansas City, May 11 (AP)—A commission to look into union with related denominations was appointed by the quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church here today. The action was taken by a vote of 852 to 2.

The commission, composed of 37 members was authorized "to make overtures to and receive overtures from like minded churches looking to cooperation and union.

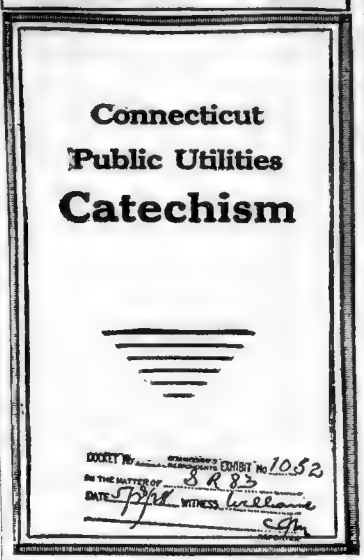
In the Schools!



THIS catechism, entered as an exhibit in the Federal Trade Commission's current investigation of the power lobby and the so-called power trust, illustrates how electric power interests are getting hold of the minds of our children, teaching them to be satisfied with public utilities that have watered stock and exorbitant charges.

The catechism is in use in Connecticut, studied as a text-book by ten thousand one hundred and ten students in the public schools, upper grade schools and high schools alike.

This text-book, supplied to them free by the Connecticut Committee on Public Service Information, teaches them that it is unpatriotic even to criticize a public utility.

"Question 9—What is the effect of adverse criticism upon utility service?

"Answer—When people in any community criticize adversely public utilities in their city, they are advertising their own city to outsiders as a poor place in which to live and are thereby retarding its growth."

This catechism has been so successful that it is being imitated by other State utility propaganda committees all over the country. Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Ohio have already followed.

CURTAINS ORDERED ON ALL LOCOMOTIVES IN N. E.

Washington, May 11 (AP)—Railroads operating in Northern States were ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission today to install curtains on engines for protection of firemen and engineers from November to April. The curtains must go on the back and sides of every engine cab in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont. Railroads must also install a hood curtain between the locomotive and tender.

MORE OFFERS FOR BIRTHDAY PARTIES

Another week almost gone, but the opportunity for boys and girls under 16 years of age to be guests of the Boston Evening American at Loew's State Theatre still remains.

Now is the time for you to write to the Birthday Editor and tell him why you are glad your birthday happened to fall on the date it did. If the letter is a good one it will win a guest ticket to the theatre and bring you an attractive birthday card.

Just two rules to remember the 16 year age limit and the mailing of your letter within the week which ends on your birthday. Address all letters, Birthday Editor, Boston Evening American, 8 Winthrop sq., Boston.

LITTLE SINS By KATHARINE BRUSH

A Story of Gay Life at Harvard

Gay Leonard, young, beautiful, spoiled darling of fortune, is loved by Alan Pomeroy, an athletic, worthwhile young man. She is fascinated by Jerry Davis, of questionable reputation, and has been forbidden by her family to see him. Jerry meets Dolly Quinn, a shop girl by day and cabaret hostess in the evening. Gay calls him up, tells her inquisitive mother it is Alan she has been talking to and is going to meet him. Later Alan calls up and Mrs. Leonard learns that Gay has gone to Jerry's rooms and in a panic phones her husband. Gay finds another girl and a man with Jerry. The man relates Jerry's meeting with Dolly Quinn. After a good many drinks Jerry crushes Gay to him. She rallies him about the dance hall girl and he admits he has never even tried to kiss her. Gay's father tells Jerry what he thinks of him and the family takes Gay South. Dolly, through Jerry's good offices, gets a job as theater usher. She starts to save $200 and refuses to take a penny from Jerry.

CHAPTER 31

DOLLY made a friend.

It began on an evening in February. She was standing behind the last row of orchestra seats watching the chorus. She became aware of a man who stood two or three yards away. He was a man of perhaps 32 or three, with a big rangy frame covered with, rather than dressed in, some sort of clothes, and an ugly, hill-ken face.

"You know," Dolly said afterward in describing him to Jerry, "there are two uglys. One's an ugly you just can't stand and want to rub a mask on to. And then there's the kind that fascinates you so you got to thinking it's almost good looking. That's what he is."

She surveyed him an instant, wondering how long he had been there and also moved toward him. "May I find you your seat?"

He turned to give a round and down, blue eyes—eyes that had seen all the trouble in the world and found most of them entertaining—looked into her eyes. He smiled. "I haven't one," he answered, and without a pause talked on: She: "What, no ticket?" He: "No, no ticket." She: "How did you get in, sir?" He: "I know the doorman. And what is vastly more, the doorman knows me."

All this in the undertone necessitated by the surroundings and with great good humor, the blue eyes twinkling merry at Dolly.

Dolly twinkled back. "He wins," she said. "I guess I'll have to let you stay."

If he had exhibited the slightest interest in the show or any indication of a desire to return his attention to it, she would then have left him forthwith. But he was regarding her as though he found her the only thing in the playhouse worth looking at, and the temptation to continue their conversation was strong. She said dutifully, "Don't you want to sit down? I think there's a vacant seat in the last row, if you'd like it," and was gratified to hear him reply in the negative.

"I'm just waiting till the end of the act," he explained. "Then I'm going back to talk to—" He nodded toward the comedian, now capering in the center of the stage, and called him by name.

"Is he a friend of yours?" asked Dolly, impressed.

"I don't know a you'd call it that, quite. We don't exchange Christmas cards or anything. I've met him a couple of times—which fact he will of course have wiped from memory's slate ere this."

"Maybe he won't see you. He's supposed to be quite temperamental."

"He'll see me all right," laconically. "He'll see any newspaper man, any time. They all will."

"Oh, so you're a newspaper man!"

"But don't hold it against me," he begged hurriedly.

"I won't," Dolly assured him. "I like newspaper men. That is, I like the idea of them. I don't really know any."

"That," he said, "should be rectified. And will be. Permit me to present an humble one—Nick Standish, of the Star."

"I read it every day!" cried Dolly.

"It irrib," said Standish gravely. "Well, now this is a coincidence, isn't it? We ought to be very good friends."

And they were.

He formed the habit of dropping into the theater once or twice a week to talk to her for 10 minutes at a time. Presently they began to go out together.

The first of these tete-a-tetes took place one evening in April, when he proceeded himself at the Gotham just at the close of the performance and said without any preamble: "Come and eat."

"I—"

"Certainly. Have to eat. Everybody ought to eat now and then. Are you fave 'robert.'"

"I never do go out after the show," said Dolly hesitantly. "I have to get up at 7—"

"Might as well stay up," said Standish. "Get your bonnet. I'll wait here."

When she resigned him dressed for the street, he demanded to be told where she wished to be taken. "Is it food you want? Or frivolity?"

"It's food you want—"

"But frivolity you want. I see it in each sapphire orb. Very well, amidst change. We'll frivol."

He had many names for her. "Small change," "Arcule," "Cub"—names of a different school indeed from that to which Jerry adhered.

"A night club," Nick ruminated aloud as they went through the lobby. "A night club that is giddy but not dreary, interesting but not

SAVES AUTOIST 5-YEAR TERM

CONSTANT WATCH NEED, SAYS HEALTH EXPERT

By DR. P. H. MULLOWNEY
DIRECTOR HEARST HEALTH LABORATORY

The appeal for a higher standard in confectionery has always met with ready response from legislators. As far back as 1913, the writer was successful in bringing about the enactment of a candy law.

This same law with some additions may be found in the Pure Food Law of today, under the title of General Laws, Chapter 94, Section 116. It is a short form law and will bear repetition here. In substance it says:

"For the purpose of sections 116 to 125, inclusive, an article shall be deemed to be adulterated . . . In the case of confectionery; if it contains terra alba, barytes, parrafin, talc, chrome yellow, or other mineral substances, or poisonous color, or other ingredient deleterious or detrimental to health, or any vinous malt or spirituous liquor, or compound, or narcotic drug."

Terra alba and the other mineral substances have long ceased to be a factor, but ingredients detrimental to health must still be guarded against.

Some of the bad results from eating the unhealthful mixtures are weak and capricious appetite, an all-gone feeling and obstinate constipation. The little victim shows no stimulation to join other children in sports, and its appetite for whole some nutritious food is gone.

Had the sugar in the candy been wholesome, sufficient exercise would cause it to be burned up in running and jumping and various other games of the children. The sickening is native, however, cannot be neutralized by the tender, digestive organs. The resistant power of the child to disease is lowered, leaving it an easy victim to the many diseases that are a scourge to young children.

One matter that deserves the attention of mothers is the method of candy sold on a stick as suckers. It is a grave question whether any sanitary and inexpensive devices for holders. They may readily become contaminated from the hands of different people holding them, and thereafter may not be made sterile.

Another danger in sticks is that they may inflict serious injury to the delicate membrane of the throat. Repeated instances have occurred where small children while eating a lollypop have fallen and the sharp end of the stick has been driven with great force into the membranes of the throat, even into the larynx.

No good purpose is served by these wooden sticks that is not served by good clean wrapping paper, and they should be abolished.

HAS LOT BUT CAN'T PUT UP HOUSE

To own a lot of land and find herself barred from building a house on it is the position of Lena Sylvester of Washington st., Winchester, who appealed to the Supreme Court today.

In a petition for a writ of certiorari she asks a hearing of a decision by the Winchester board of appeals which held that she could not erect the house under the zoning laws of the town.

Although it has been settled that the board acted within its powers, the issues may the library questions and likely must be settled by the full bench of the court.

Counsel for petitioner asserted all requirements, including provisions of the zoning law, were complied with.

SENTENCE HALTED BY HIGH COURT

A sentence of five years and a day, imposed on John F. Burgerald of Charlestown, who injured three children while driving a stolen automobile, was today set aside by Judge Sanderson of the Supreme Court.

Fitzgerald, who has been arrested several times for unlawful use of automobiles, was sentenced by Chief Justice Hart after being found guilty of several counts of automobile law violations.

He appealed and a writ of error, and Judge Sanderson ruled that the penalty for the offense under the law is a period not more than $100 or less than one day in imprisonment for not less than two weeks nor more than two years, or both.

His case now is before the Supreme Court for a review of sentence.

Sonnenberg Crushes Munn in Mat Bout at Arena

DYNAMITE IS QUICK VICTOR

Scores First Fall in 1m. 19s. and Second Fall in 25s.

By JACK CONWAY

CUS (DYNAMITE) SONNENBERG, former Dartmouth All-American tackle, continued his wild surge in the direction of a championship bout with Strangler Lewis when he crushed Wayne (Big) Munn, an All-American tackle when at Nebraska, in their wrestling bout at the Arena.

Sonnenberg counted with the first fall in 1m. 19s., while he pinned the giant Munn's shoulders to the mats for the second fall in 25s.

Jack Conway

Munn, a former world's champion wide and irrepressible showman, blew up the affair early in the bout after Sonnenberg opportunely but tied into a couple of times in his attempts.

This was a fast, clean battle according to everyone. The Dartmouth and Nebraska alumni were in hot spirits before the match, with Munn's backers getting the best of the betting odds.

Sonnenberg's appearance favor Munn's six feet six inches tall and weighs 260 pounds, while the old Dartmouth gridiron hero is only six feet seven inches tall and scales only 240 pounds.

STANLEY STASIAK, who trained Sonnenberg for his match with Munn decided that a body attack was the best way to regain Munn's mat title. The Lion of Poland hurled to such tactics almost the first time they locked arms and for a while it looked as though Munn might be in for a severe trimming.

But Munn soon got over the shock of Sonnenberg's body attack and settled down to his own style of wrestling. After a little mauling on the mat, Sonny gave one of his flying tackles. Instead of going for Munn's legs as he has in the other bouts, Sonny drove his head deep into Wayne's midsection and gripped him around the body.

Sonny scored four times with this kind of attack. Each time he smashed his head into Munn's stomach, the latter doubled up and his mouth opened wide. It appeared he didn't like the treatment he was receiving from the Dartmouth lad's tactics.

As Munn wobbled around the ring Sonnenberg circled on him, measuring him for the finishing blow. Sonny would feint for Munn's legs and then shoot his head into the wrestler's midsection. Munn would double over and Sonny would grab his wrist and leg and be set for the second fall.

After a ten minute rest period, Munn made a desperate attempt to regain the mat title. The Lion of Poland turned to such tactics as he thought might bring him victory, but Sonnenberg was not to be denied. He had dropped to the mat once too many times to be thrown off his guard.

As soon as Referee Lou Magnolia ordered into the ring Sonnenberg, both Munn and Sonnenberg were in the mat. They locked their arms around each other's body and legs as they rolled over and over on the mat, each trying to get the other in a position where he could pin the shoulders to the mat. Munn was the first to get his shoulders down, but Sonnenberg was on top of him and had the Lion of Poland's shoulders pinned to the mat before Munn could get his shoulders off the mat.

Stan and Rocky in Hot Poetical Duel

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

As the head of the Boston American sports department bureau of intelligence research is still recuperating from injuries received by falling off a wagon, further reports on the questionnaire sent out to local fighters and boxers will not be given until Monday.

However, the opening shots have been fired in the battle of poetry between Pan Stanislaus Stasiak, grand lettuan of the mat, and Phaedrus Stone, sometimes called "Rocky," Delphian of the Ring.

In the effusion of our readers, we publish for the next time, in full, the opening lines of these two sport Raders. The prize for the best poem of each will be announced later.

These poems will be submitted to Gene Tunney and Umberto Torriani, whose opinions appear above for final judgment.

Song of the Merry Matman By PAN STASIAK	Spring in Roxbury By PHAEDRUS (ROCKY) STONE
"Poland's Lion," the mad mob calls me, Master of a thousand holds; I am Stanley, there's none like me— The gods made me, then broke the molds.	The sun comes up on Blue Hill ave., Some lowlife knocks him down Whig chance, I ask you, did I have For any fame, but clown.
Turk and Russian, I have met them, I have floored the fearful Litt, None can match my iron muscles, None can match my matchless wit.	I punch the bag, both night and morn And run my arches flat; Some Irisher, crazed by the moon Smacks me from 'neath my hat.
Greek and Irish fall before me, "Phew"—I blow—they fall like chaff, Champions?—Bah! Bring on your victims, Beat me? Why it is to laugh*	I sigh to meet them, big and small No dough, but just the cakes; I never get no break at all— And oly, my poor nose aches.
Some men wish to die in battle, Others jog grow old and fat; As for me, let me chew ears off . . . Like to me the resined mat. *Pronounced "taff."	No title have I ever sought But only just the glory And what gorillas I have fought And never got no story.

Tournament Play Makes Champions

By MIRIAM BURNS HORN

Women's National Golf Champion

IT is all right to feel that a champion can be developed from the raw material, so to speak. After years of hard work and practice, but real champions are the product of long tournament experience.

I do not care who the individual may be, how versatile, or how perfect the golf game, I do not think she really is at her best until she has competed in a number of tournaments, and gained the invaluable aid of that experience, together with the knowledge derived from defeats.

It is tournaments and competitive play which develops the game. That begins a long way back, almost to the stags of beginners.

Everyone should be given the same advantage. Naturally it is no fun for the high handicap man to meet the low one, and naturally suffer the discouraging results.

But it is interesting and also a pleasure to play against one of the same ranking, or comparatively so. I mean by that that the competition should begin in one's own club.

In my opinion, there should be frequent matches for all classes.

IN this line is is difficult to decide whether match or medal play is the more advantageous, but in any event, it is experience which counts.

The two go hand in hand. No doubt for the poorer golfers match play is the more beneficial, and without question, the more interesting.

It might be embarrassing to compete scores which run way above the century mark, while the announcement of results would be no different from those of champion-ship calibre.

I shall always feel that the individual clubs should inaugurate more tournaments of various kinds. The Western girls do not have the experience that the Easterners do.

UNFORTUNATELY the distances are so great out West that to travel from place to place continually, makes golf a very expensive game. Consequently, there are comparatively few tournaments, while around the metropolitan district it is possible to make one's personal selection, and still play almost all the time.

The great fault in the west is that there is not sufficient interest shown to warrant frequent tournaments. But I say let those play who will, and leave the others out. After so long a time, if they are really anxious for the experience, they will awaken to the opportunities they are overlooking. And it is not fair for all to suffer the penalty of the minority.

THIS should be a systematic plan, with the clubs, first of all, taking the initiative, then the City Golf Associations, and so on up to the highest, trying to encourage better golf by affording all the advantages possible.

One cannot expect to enter a big tournament with no previous experience and win. So this competition must be gained all along the line. Personally I am not physically equal to constant play, but I should like to feel that I could have some worth-while tournament play whenever I cared for it.

As it is now, whenever I miss a tournament I am bitterly disappointed because it is usually so long before there is another.

O'FARRELL GOES TO GIANTS

Surprising as the Hornsby-Hogan-Welch deal might have been to New York and Boston fandom, the latest trade which brings Bob O'Farrell, Cardinal catcher, to the Giants for George Harper, has got St. Louis fans ready to declare war. O'Farrell is considered the best catcher in the National League and his transfer to the Giants for the 35-year-old Harper was the biggest surprise trade of the year.

Just why the Cards let O'Farrell go, leaving two unseasoned catchers to fill the bill, is something that club officials will have to answer. O'Farrell succeeded Rogers Hornsby when he was traded to the Giants. There was no indication that the popular catcher was on the market. The Giants benefit by the trade but we can't see how it will help them to win another pennant by McGraw.

OPEN HOUSE AT VETS' HOSPITAL

Open house is being held at the Veterans Hospital, West Roxbury, for two days when the public is invited to call in the hospital and inspect various buildings during the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m.

Commencing at 2 p. m. a series of athletic events, under the direction of the physical director, will be held on the hospital grounds.

The following events will take place all participants being patients of the hospital: 40 yard dash, 100 yard dash, shotput, running broad jump, potato races, wheelbarrow races, half-mile walk.

Prizes have been secured for the winners in each event.

Following the half-mile walk a ball game will be played between the Chelsea Naval Hospital and the West Roxbury Veterans' Hospital.

This game will be the first of a series of five, for which a beautiful silver loving cup has been donated. Judges and umpires for the various events and ball game will probably be recruited from among the members of the Red Sox and St. Louis teams.

The Hon. Rocky Stone has also been invited, together with Lou Bogash, to help in the entertainment of the boys. Bill Carrigan has promised to send some of the Red Sox team out and may attend himself.

TAYLOR TO GET $18,000 FOR GO

The featherweight match between Sammy Fuller, New England featherweight king, and Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, bantamweight champion of the world, may be signed by Monday for June 4 at Fenway Park.

Eddie Long, manager of Taylor, has been insistant that Taylor is worth a $20,000 guarantee to appear in Boston against Fuller, the latest hitting featherweight in the world. Goodwin's highest offer has been $15,000, but yesterday, on leaving the hospital to which he has been confined for some weeks, he announced that Long had reduced his price to $18,000, and that it was possible his demand would be met.

Taylor's price can be paid only because of the fact that Fuller is willing to fight him for training expenses alone. The little Italian featherweight, who would have an advantage of five or six pounds in weight over Taylor, believes that he could score a knockout over the bantamweight king.

Fuller is willing to gamble on his punch, for if he should score a decisive victory over Taylor, he would be a national figure. The little Italian has been boxing in superb form in Toland's Gymnasium, and has told Goodwin to sign Taylor at any costs, and that he would box for gymnasium expenses.

Red Sox Drive for Another Cellar Escape Today

BIG RUFFING TO PITCH FINAL WITH CHISOX

THERE'S many a slip on the baseball cellar stairs. The Red Sox flopped back, after one whole day out, and so had to begin all over this afternoon. Large Charlie Ruffing was in line to do the pitching, and if he can unlimber one of his rare good games, the Chisox should go away from here this evening, holding up the whole league.

The Carrigan Sox will be stacked up against Alphonse Thomas, who was one of the best pitchers in the league last year. Alphonse hasn't been himself this spring. He lost his control somewhere during the winter, and if the Sox have any luck coming their way, he will not find it this afternoon.

Big Ruffing did not [illegible] in his last game, but that was against the Indians, who are good at a much faster clip than the Chicago outfit. Used Short Pole to Set New World's Mark

Los Angeles, May 11 (AP)—In setting a new world's record pole vault mark of 14 feet 3½ inches, Lee Barnes used a bamboo stick 2½ inches shorter than the height he cleared.

Instead of taking a longer pole to set a new mark, he resorted to a lighter stick that has been kept under all season to use in case of emergency.

He believes that lighter poles and pole sticks seem just as much extra weight to carry in running up to the bar.

Part of the secret of Barnes' success lies in the speed with which he approaches the standards and crosses, and Dean B. Cromwell, Trojan coach, [illegible] speed to the [illegible] pole [illegible] and [illegible] pole.

Amateur Golf Stars in Exhibition for Olympic Fund

COUNTRY CLUB SCENE OF STERLING MATCH

By BILL GRIMES

Through the courtesy of the members of The Country Club, Francis Ouimet, the former United States open and amateur champion, Jess Sweetser, who has held both the British and United States titles, Phillips Finlay and Roland McKenzie, will play in an exhibition match at Clyde Park tomorrow afternoon.

Although golf is not an Olympic sport, George W. Wightman, who is chairman of the New England division of the American Olympic committee, arranged with the Massachusetts Golf Association to put on the exhibition, which will bring together two former national champions and two of the most promising of the younger generation. The proceeds will be donated to the Olympic fund.

Francis Ouimet, with Phillips Finlay, Fifteen years ago Ouimet met and defeated Clyde Park in the With Ted Ray, Vardon and Ouimet would Club Saturday afternoon, and, although Jay, and even Sweetser was very young at the time, he was a formidable opponent, as he won the British amateur title from Jess Sweetser has been one of the competitive golf figures of the country, he is now back in perfect health and condition, and is right at the peak of his game. This will be Sweetser's first appearance of importance in Boston since he won the British amateur title at Sandwich, England, and as he intends to play in the National open next month at Inwood, it will afford lovers of golf an opportunity to size up the two stars.

WON FIRST MAJOR TITLE

Six years ago Ouimet startled the golfing world by coming through the field to win the United States open championship, defeating Harry Vardon and Ted Ray, the famous English professionals, in a playoff. Two years later Ouimet duplicated the feat by defeating Edward (Ted) Ray, the English professional, in the National open championship at Brookline. Ouimet had the misfortune to be injured in an automobile accident a few years ago, and was forced to retire from competitive golf for a time. He came back with a rush, however, and won the Massachusetts amateur championship in 1925.

FINLAY IS READY

Phillips Finlay has been regarded as one of the best golfers in Boston for several years. He certainly is one of the most modest golfers in the game, and has never been known to boast of his golfing ability. He has been playing golf for many years, and has a fine record to his credit. He is a member of the Brae Burn Country Club, and has been a consistent performer in the open championships of the Massachusetts Golf Association. He is a graduate of Harvard University, and is a member of the Harvard Club of Boston. He is a member of the Boston Athletic Association, and is a member of the Boston Yacht Club. He is a member of the Boston Country Club. He is a member of the Boston Golf Club. He is a member of the Boston Golf Association. He is a member of the Boston Golf Association. He is a member of the Boston Golf Association.

Jones and the Scot was put out by Sarazen, 8 and 7, and in the finals Evans was defeated by Tommy Armour, 5 and 4.

HELPS SWELL FUND

Francis Ouimet, former amateur golf champion, and Phillips Finlay will play an exhibition match at the Country Club tomorrow for the Olympic fund. This pair will be opposed by Roland McKenzie and Jess Sweetser. This quartet represents the cream of amateur golfers. Sweetser has recovered from his recent illness and is at the top of his game. The veteran, Ouimet, is ever reliable. A real match, that will appeal, is the outlook from all indications.

AMERICAN STAR SHOOTS GREAT LAST ROUND

fused to play safe with a chance to get home by carrying a large bunker. When Hagen's ball hit the top of the hazarde and rolled back into the trap a moan went up from the large gallery which was following the American. But the moan turned to cheers when Hagen stepped into the trap and exploded to within eight feet of the cup and dropped his putt for a par 4.

HAGEN MISSES PUTTS.

Hagen, on the last round, reached the first green with his mashie approach, but didn't quite get down with a 12-footer for his attempt at a birdie. He was short with his approach at the next hole, but repiled with a sizeable putt for a 4 after overdriving his approach putt. Hagen's irons were playing him false. He failed to get home on the third with his pooh from the tee and his approach left him a four-footer, which he fortunately missed.

A 5 followed at the fourth because he failed to reach the green with his second and was very short with a difficult uphill approach putt. He experienced the same difficulty at the fifth—short with his second and five feet short with his third. But he holed the putt this time.

The haig, however, missed with a six-footer at the sixth, after he had lofted his tee shot to the short green on the left. He needed the putt for a par. The eighth was an uneventful par 5, but he got a sorely-needed birdie 2 and a salvo of applause at the eighth, where he laid a perfect mashie tee shot within a yard of the pin and sank the putt. A three-foot putt saved the Haig a par at the ninth, after his had been wide with his approach.

Hagen was brilliant and careful by turns as he shot the last nine, confident in the realization that the man who won the tournament would have to beat his score.

WOMAN'S FOOT HELPS

He got quite a break at the thirteenth, where a woman's foot providentially diverted his ball to a better lie, leaving him an easy pitch to the green for a 4. Walter was in his first trap of the round at the fourteenth, the deadly Sahara final hole, and his second was popped into a pot bunker. His put overran the green but he chipped back within 4 feet of the cup and down went the putt for a par 5.

Hagen knew now that he was in for a good score, yet he declined to play safely on a long carry over a bunker at the fifteenth.

"This shot might win the championship," he said with a smile to the veteran Sandy Herd.

"It hasn't," Herd came back grimly. "It's in the bunker."

It was. But Haig pitched blithely to within eight feet of the pin and, with a true Hagen flourish, sank the putt for a four amid thunderous applause. He had almost the entire gallery with him as he finished carefully in three pars.

Hagen's card, final score:

Out. 4 4 4 5 4 4 3 5 4—36
In . 4 4 4 4 3 4 4 5 4—36—72—292

Hagen started like a whirlwind covering the first nine holes in 33, two under par. He took 39 in but his 72, his best round of the championship play, was good enough to install him in first place for the time being.

SARAZEN PLAYS WELL

Sarazen played sound golf, going out one under par in 34 and needing 38. Hagen's total on the home journey for the second nine. Sarazen had plenty of room left on the home green and got down a great putt at the 18th to score a birdie three and go into a tie with Jurado for the runner-up position after 54 holes.

Jurado's outward journey of the final round was not convincing, despite the presence in the gallery of the Prince of Wales, bareheaded and bronzed in brown plus fours. The prince was vigorously chewing gum, as if to honor an American day.

Jurado's trouble started at the second hole, where he was bunkered and it grew worse as he went along. His only relief being a snappy eight foot putt for a par 3 at the eighth.

50,000 AT PREAKNESS RACE CLASSIC TODAY

Pimlico Race Track, Md., May 11 (AP)—Pimlico was the mecca of upwards of 50,000 turf followers today as 21 thoroughbreds prepared to march to the post for the $50,000 Preakness stake. Nassak, Chestnut son of John P. Grier and Ethel D., who races in the green and white silks of Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas stable, ruled the favorite among the best of America's three year old whole colts and fillies, and was favored generally to win the historic Woodlawn cup, emblematic of the Preakness crown. The race is at one mile and three sixteenths.

Adventure and Romance Amid Scenes of Almost Barbaric Splendor

CHAPTER 22

WE WERE told that the elephant had been killed after a good chase and that the Ochebas, who had been away to the east, had been watching the hunt from ambush. We hurried up, following our guide, and found all of our strength and ten or twelve of our Okelly friends all carrying guns in extended order in the rocky ground to protect the men who were cutting up the carcass and chopping out the ivories.

Iwolo pointed the Ochebas cannibals out and I put the glasses on a small hill covered with bush. They were moving round excitedly and were no doubt preparing to attack us. We took up a position about 200 yards south of where the dead animal lay and were about full strength and therefore well prepared for any emergency.

The tusks were now free, whilst about ten bassots were filled with elephant meat ready to carry off to the villages. The women now excitedly shouldered their loads as well as the tusks, which were a fine pair, when the Ochebas in an extended line began to advance on us.

Old Iwolo now ordered the loads and meat to be brought into the bush at the foot of the hill where we were posted. Iwolo ordered rifling until the Ochebas came nearer. He handed me the field glasses.

They were coming in extended order like skilled fighters, taking short runs in turns so as to avoid fatigue. They were not less than 80 yards away, were painted up and armed with guns, cross bows and spears. They made a fine show as they came forward. The Okellys amongst the rocks began to fire whilst the enemy came on firing, but still kept formation, when Iwolo gave the order to open on them.

The effect of our rifle fire was instantaneous. I saw several fall through the glasses, but they now took a prone position and crawled near the Okellys. They were brave men and I asked Iwolo, who was an old fighter, if he could not call the Okellys off. But the old man only laughed, saying their meat and their fight, and ordered the rifles to cease fire. Too many good cartridges wasted on the Ochebas, he said.

As he spoke a band of young Okelly warriors appeared and advanced to the native firing line and the battle commenced now in earnest. The Okellys are splendid fighters and after a short space of time the Ochebas cleared away with the Okellys following them up for some distance, but they were loath to leave the rocky ground, and soon the Ochebas were well away, brandishing their spears in defiance.

The Okellys plundered the dead and left the wounded naked, but did not kill them, as they said it was foolish to kill such as fair fighting was looked upon by the Ochebas as sport or fun, but on the other hand they knew their wounded and would revenge them, but would be satisfied with their good beating and would leave them there for a good time hunt further afield.

'We Counted Seven Dead and Twice as Many Wounded'

We now left the hill and as the Okellys were busily engaged cutting up meat and carrying their wounded to town, Iwolo numbering five and one lay dead in the stone pile. Coming to the Ochebas dead and wounded we counted seven killed and twice as many wounded. The wounded men conversed freely and to those who wanted it I gave a good tot of Red Heart Rum, which I found better than brandy on such occasions. One tall cannibal who was not able to walk, but was badly hit in the stomach, smilingly said, "Ma Ke Wa Kleris." I shall die tomorrow. Two or three of them walked toward their country.

On entering the Okelly town the Chief and his headmen, who were all old, came to congratulate me and thank us for the assistance we had given them in drawing away their enemies.

The night was spent in music and story telling by Iwolo, and the town hall, being grass roof supported by hardwood posts, was well filled, while the women brought in plenty of leaves full of cooked elephant meat and such berries and bonbons as the country afforded. We had a pleasant time and left next morning on our rivier expedition straight into the heart of wildest Africa.

We now entered wild and very picturesque country whilst we passed many islands and after again passing small Mpangue towns we came on the most beautiful portion of the Ogowe river, which here widened. Numerous islands are inhabited by the Okowas, a superior race of negroes and the best canoe men in rapid waters one could wish for.

I took two days rest here. I had the pleasure of finding the nearest point of this portion of the river, which runs, so the Ochebas say, to the lands from which they all come, which I think must be somewhere towards Equatorial Africa, and yet further towards the lake.

Every Mpangue is supposed to quote his ancestry before he is allowed to marry and the names of forebears are so many I had generally to beg them to keep quiet as they were surely descended from a race who must have lived before the Egyptians.

I left the Akota country and the next tribe to them on the south bank of the river are the Okandu. The Okandu country is full of Hovis or plains on which roam great herds of wild cattle or Nyari, whilst there are a few small buffalo but their horns are across rather leaving the temple plate are straight up and make them greatly feared by lone hunters as they will often charge at sight and can walse round like bucks.

The Elim river turns south from the Ocowa and the two are one followed by Count de Brazza who followed this river and then crossed over the Lilma desert where he was attacked by the inhabitants, who live mostly on ant rice, i. e. the ant eggs to be found in the small mounds or anthenaps, which are numerroous.

'He Had a Machine Gun And Easily Drove Them Off'

As he was supplied with a small French machine gun and had some French and Senegalese soldiers armed with the Lebel Gross, he had no difficulty in driving them off. As he stayed with us at Adamago making ready for the expedition we became very friendly.

Again the writer pauses to make a few pertinent remarks to Mrs. Lewis—this time bringing in a humorous incident about the American donkey.

"I've got a bit of fighting this time. In a book that's not truth at the bottom it can scarcely be avoided. But it doesn't do, Ma'am, to run too much bloodshed through a book. We must suppress some of that. Axe, too much of it becomes monotonous. Puiterary. When you've seen what I've seen as a kid you'll not be wanting to write it out with all the commas complete. Same as the kids ar was in it won't talk once the War. I've no wish to emphasize what the eye and the brain will never forget.

"Winding up post those Hovas, and then I'll be getting on to the loose women. Marble baths and so on, 'stead of a good fetch in the river at dawn.

"Often I have a good laff to myself when I see de Brazza's donkeys chasing a whole village before 'em. They think a man's dear they used to call 'em. Yaw! Yaw! It sure ass a comical appetition. He'd just landed 'em—a great meeting of jacks and jennies that he'd brought in two hundreds. Yaw! Yaw! they said and kicked up their heels like the best two-yearolds.

"Drove the whole village before them, faster and faster. Aye, those donkeys made more of a conquest then penetration by battle.

"They put flight into fellers a bevy of elephants couldn't have scared. 'Twas the voice that did it. Yaw! Yaw!

"Someone said they were lions, and that made anyone run the faster. They knew nothing about lions in those parts beyond what slaves from afar had told 'em. Tiss, donkers, being no more than humans, galloped for pleasure at finding old earth under their hoofs again. Big-toned fighters fled whimpering before 'em. Aye, it sure was the Donkeys' Hour.

"Showers of hawks after a bit of a set-to like that I had with the Ochebas. The secret hanks of the Mpangues. They picked the bones of the wounded. So choicey, they'll not wait for death. One poor fellow came to and found a hawk had plucked his eye out. He jumped up and walked about looking for that was empty, and when he fell again I shot him out of his misery.

"Pity sure makes a man cruel. The witch-doctor's answer but there was nothing else for it. I'd not hot with hard blowing and soup it upside down on the sand and with water it stopping. Now to draw the poison and exuberate at the same time.

"But there's that chicken race, if there's one handy. You pluck a cock-pitch out from the wing and scratch a slight wound in the cock. Apply this to the wound, pinch the cock's head, decapitate the cock and squeeze the blood into the wound. I'd lain myself a pile full of tobacco, and that walked but should recover. And he patient'll be all right

"Aye, Nature sure has spread some of the ingenuity of a man over the wilder races, 'tis not all re-served for 17 cubicles."

extravagant. A night club where the three lowly five dollar bills that repose in my jeans at the moment will enable us to do more than pay the cover charge and walk out again on—Eureka! I know the very place. Tan!"

"The very place" was the Club Seven Rivers. A long narrow room perched at the top of steep narrow stairs. A negro orchestra in wrong-and-gay gingham shirts, seated informally on what purported to be the bank of the river painted on the wall at their backs. Three other walls representing cotton fields in, as Nick put it, "full cotton."

A dance floor not as large as half a tennis court, bordered by tiny tables with red plaid tablecloths. A cabaret consisting of a small vanilla darky who did the Charleston, a large chocolate darky who did the Charleston, a quartette of assorted darks who sang "Charleston Back to Charleston" and a cafe au lait maiden who Charlestoned.

"Something," Nick declared, "has got to be done to check the spread of that thing. Four out of five have it. The fifth is taking lessons."

It developed that he did not dance at all. Chiropodists' offices are jammed with the women who've tried to teach me" he said. So they remained for two hours at their table, talking, exchanging opinions and experiences, availing themselves happily of this first opportunity to give their friendship solid foundation.

Over a steaming cold Welsh rarebit Nick observed suddenly, "You're being very devilish, you know. Trotting out to night clubs with married men—"

Dolly dropped her fork and sat back, looking startled. "Who, you?"

"None other."

"Are you really."

"I am, really."

"But—why didn't you tell me, Nick?"

"Well, there's never been a logical opening, has there? Of course, I could have said out of a clear sky, 'See here, urchin, I'm married.' But it would have sounded—well, you see yourself how it would have sounded. Like stopping a normal acquaintance on the street and saying, 'Don't go to my house, I'm not home.' The acquaintance would then retort with pardonable acerbity, 'Who wants to go to your house, you fiend?' I never thought of it before, there."

"Where's your wife?" interrogated Dolly, ignoring this. A wrinkle had appeared across the bridge of her short straight nose. That Nick was married meant nothing whatever to her personally; there was, as he well understood, no romantic sentiment in her regard for him. But that she should be gadding about New York in the wee hours with some other woman's husband was—was distinctly—"Oh, darn it!" wailed Dolly Quinn.

Final Bid..... Played by West

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will present another set of hands for the study of our readers.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i.e., as though all four hands were exposed.

THE BIDDING

South can rebid one, but no more, without support of partner. West, unassisted, secures the contract at three Diamonds.

THE PLAY

Trick 4. Declarer has all the remaining tricks solid between the two hands, except a losing Spade. The only possibility of discarding this loser and going game on the hand lies in establishing the 13th Club in Dummy. Declarer leads the 4 of Clubs and takes the Queen of Clubs with the King of Spades in Dummy as entries for other leads.

Trick 5. The 13th Club is established and leaves the lost trick in each suit in Dummy with the 10 of Spades.

Mr Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

Today's Winner in Our Sad Story Contest

Sir—

Have you heard about the Scotchman who took his little boy to the beach? The boy wandered off and fell into the ocean. After a hard struggle a life guard rescued the little boy, just in the nick of time. A large crowd assembled around the life guard to congratulate him. The Scotchman elbowed his way to the life guard and asked if he was the man who had saved his little boy's life. The life guard answered in the affirmative. Whereupon the Scotchman demanded, "Where's his cap?"

PROPER CHILD CONTROL

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

MRS. GOODSENSE lives on a quiet suburban street. There are children in all the pretty homes on both sides of the street; and every day the little folks run back and forth from one yard to another. Sometimes they ride their bicycles, or roll hoops, or skate up and down the broad street.

Wee Johnny sees the other children having a good time, and he often follows his sister into the street. Very few cars pass that way; and when the residents drive home, they drive slowly, blow the automobile horn and keep their eyes wide open. That makes it fairly safe for the children.

But the other day Johnny and his mother were visiting his aunt in the city. The street on which the aunt lives is a favorite thoroughfare for speed demons. Of course, three-year-old Johnny didn't know that. So, when his ball rolled into the street he ran to get it. As he stooped to pick it up, a truck almost struck him.

"You ought to paddle him," declared Auntie. "If you don't whip him, he may get killed next time. You've got to teach him to stay out of the street."

Auntie is like a lot of folks who permit their own excitement or fear to vent itself on the child in question.

When mother's nerves were a little calmer and the color had come back to her face, she said:

"Yes, I'll have to teach him that, but he isn't due a spanking for doing what he is allowed to do every day at home. Hereafter I'll keep him out of our streets, and then he will learn that he must stay out of all streets."

Mrs. Capricious is an entirely different kind of mother. Sometimes she says "yes," and then takes it back. Sometimes she says "no" and then lets the children argue her into allowing something that she knows is unwise. Sometimes she promises her children a certain small pleasure, and then goes off and forgets all about it.

They never know what to expect. They would like very much to have something upon which they can depend. But mother keeps them "up in the air" about half the time.

If her new dress hangs right and her hat is becoming and she won the prize at the bridge party, the youngsters can tear down the house and get away with it. But just let them try it when she has a headache or had a fuss with the maid or meets with some other serious disaster like that.

That mother grieves a lot about the punishment she has to inflict upon her sons and daughters. She tells them that it is for their own good. But, they know better. They know that their punishment is mostly for their temperamental mother's own satisfaction.

You can't fool smart little youngsters about their own good. They know when a grown-up is looking after their interests.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE care of the heart is one of the most vital and important things in life.

When your heart hardens or "goes dead," either emotionally or physically, you are ready for the undertaker.

* * *

Keeping the heart tender and alive and responsive is the primary secret of keeping young. It is the whole foundation of youth-extension; and what we are all really seeking is not so much life-extension as "youth-extension."

* * *

When your heart can no longer beat high with hope, with love, with excitement, with enthusiasm, or just with the joy of living, you might as well pick out your tombstone, plant the ivy and the lilies and settle down to gray old age. For you are beginning to die "at the top."

* * *

A man is not old when his hair turns gray and he gets wrinkles in his cheeks, but when his hopes and enthusiasm turn gray and he gets wrinkles on the heart.

* * *

In these days when it is considered smart to be hardboiled and skeptical and cynical hearts are very much out of date. They are supposed to be found only in morons and novels and on paper valentines.

* * *

We talk a lot about "self-expression," but any expression of sentiment or emotion or spontaneous enthusiasm is regarded as naive and unsophisticated. We are deliberately choking back the fountain of youth in the unholy fear of making fools of ourselves.

* * *

Next to chewing gum there is nothing that sticks to you quite so persistently as a reputation for having made a fool of yourself. But not half so many of a man's follies are due to a soft heart as are due to a soft head.

* * *

When a woman in her forties allows a boy in his twenties to make a fool and a spectacle of her she fancies that it is because she's so soft hearted and full of sentiment.

* * *

But it is not! It is because she's so soft HEADED and full of vanity.

* * *

When a middle-aged man who ought to have reached years of discretion allows a little gold digger to mulct him or drag him into a breach-of-promise suit he imagines that it is because he has such a big, trusting heart.

* * *

But it's not. It's because he has such a big overgrown EGO and such a tiny half-portion of common sense.

* * *

If you can keep your head hard and cool and your heart soft and warm you will get about everything out of this life that is worth having, from love to eternal youth.

* * *

Whether the heart is an organ, a muscle, or an emotional machine, keeping it healthy, young, tender and glowing is the chief business of life! Have a heart!

UNITED SHOE REPORT TO SHOW GOOD EARNINGS

All the belated reports are by no means bad. The annual report of the United Shoe Machinery Corporation for the fiscal year ended February 29, 1928, will issue in about a fortnight and will show net profits of rising $9,000,000, or several hundred thousand dollars more than the $8,800,000 net before taxes for the 1926 fiscal year. Last year's showing will represent a new high level of earning power.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON, MAY 11, 1928

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land, in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

"Sorry,—No Room"

What Robert B. Brigham Hospital Is Compelled to Say to MANY "Incurables"

Tomorrow, anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale, will be observed throughout the United States as National Hospital Day. The Nation's hospitals, which number nearly 7000 and care for 12,000,000 patients every year, will open their doors to visitors in order that citizens may see what the community is doing for its sick and injured.

A good way for the Bostonian to keep the day will be by sending his check, or a postal money-order, to Mr. Russell G. Fessenden, treasurer of the Robert B. Brigham Hospital Campaign, 100 Milk Street.

Because of what he did for so-called "incurables," we owe a lot to the memory of Robert B. Brigham.

Brigham came down from Northern Vermont in 1842, a boy of 16, opened an oyster bar, became the proprietor of a hotel, built the Hollis Street Theatre and when he died, in 1900, left nearly all of a $3,000,000 estate to charity.

Twenty-one hospitals and charitable associations receive annuities of $1000 each from the Brigham Fund.

The bulk of his fortune was set aside for the construction and maintenance of a hospital—it stands on Parker Hill in Roxbury—for victims of chronic disease, who because of the long-time treatment they require cannot be admitted to other hospitals.

Like other institutions of the kind the Robert B. Brigham Hospital has found that the cost per patient is many times what it was at the beginning of the World War. Only 37 per cent of last year's total expenditure, for example, was met by the income from the Brigham estate.

The hospital is not in debt, it is operating within its income—from the estate, from invested funds and from service—but its BUILDINGS ARE UNEQUAL TO THE DEMANDS OF THOSE WHO NEED ADMISSION.

Of last year's applications—sufferers from "chronic rheumatism," heart conditions, bone tuberculosis, chronic kidney and intestinal diseases—more than half had to be refused because of lack of room.

The campaign committee, of which Mr. Hollis French is president, seeks to raise $600,000, the plan being to build and endow a wing of 34 additional beds for FREE patients, build a solarium and pay for necessary alterations.

The hospital—ANY hospital—has a legitimate claim upon all of us.

The man of great wealth when he is ill is able to command the best brains, the greatest skill and the widest experience.

Institutions like this hospital collect all these priceless things and GIVE them to the poor.

Every Bostonian may have a part in this estimable work if he will observe National Hospital Day—in honor of doctors and nurses, let us say—by giving to the Robert B. Brigham Hospital campaign AS GENEROUSLY AS HIS MEANS WILL ALLOW.

James Montgomery Flagg, in search of beauty and visiting Los Angeles, tells the possessors of that wonderful climate, "The girl of 1930 will stop bobbing her hair and make it up by bobbing her skirt." He took his pencil and drew the two ladies of 1930 that you see here.

AN AMERICAN GIRL IS 'CONVERTED'

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WITH all the magnificence of Indian pomp and ceremony, Devi Sharmista, nee Nancy Ann Miller of Seattle, was joined in marriage recently to the former Maharajah of Indore.

She had to adopt the Hindoo faith in order to wed the man she wanted.

We are a little skeptical as to the value of this "conversion."

It is manifestly of the order of those who join a church for social reasons or adopt some other religion than their own original one for ulterior motives.

That it was a case of sincere conviction after a careful examination of the evidences is hardly probable.

But it calls attention to the fact that religion with most people is generally but a war cry. In any case, people's religion is usually that in which they are brought up.

We find ourselves in possession of certain ideas and customs and we apply our intellect not to examining whether they are well based or not, but to searching the reasons for proving that they are right.

James Harvey Robinson calls attention to the fact that we get our convictions largely by heredity and environment and use our reasoning powers to buttress them, and not to make them in the first place.

The incident of a man who after looking the field over and weighing all the probabilities adopts a religion of his own is rare.

Therefore the greatest power of a faith is its out-populating power. The best way to get more believers is to breed them and bring them up.

For every one who is "converted" there are ten who have inherited their faith.

It is singular that a "renegade" is condemned on all sides whether he is a Republican that has turned Democrat, a Methodist that has turned Presbyterian or what. There seems to be something off color in a man changing his faith for any reason.

In spite of our boasted freedom of opinion and action there is a strong prejudice against the sincerity of any sort of a "turn coat."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

MY dog scared up a rabbit as we crossed the field. The rabbit bolted, doubled on its tracks, raced like mad, then suddenly popped down its hole. And I thought of Dorothy Owins.

Dorothy pops down holes too. Not actual holes, but other exits which serve just as well as an escape from reality. Dorothy was a Mama's Girl, petted, shielded, never did a lick of work until she was 27. Then the money gave out and she had to look for a job.

She went at it bravely at first. Learned stenography in jig time and got a good position in a lumber firm. But the noise, the hurry, the brisk commands, the criticism of that office were more terrible to Dorothy than any dog could ever be to any rabbit. They hounded her. Each day she longed more miserably for a way out. Presently she began to develop sick headaches. Wretched headaches that laid her up for two or three days at a time. In a darkened room, with only mother around. Very mysterious—the doctors can't decide whether it's her eyes or her stomach or her nerves. Poor Dorothy. Everyone's sorry for her—getting sick like that, just when she was trying so hard. Dorothy's sorry for herself. She honestly believes that she can't help those headaches. And yet—it's such a relief to be away from the office—away from that strange world to which she can't adjust herself.

An escape from reality—the desperate ruse of a bewildered spirit to shield itself—that's the secret of Dorothy's headaches.

Doctors and psychologists are discovering that much of our sickness and "sinning" is simply an effort to escape from reality—hunted life popping down a hole.

There's Jim Howard. Life's too much for poor Jim. A nagging wife, five children he can't support, a rushing world he can't understand. Jim's always saying that he wishes he was out of it all. He gets out of it all about once a month when he goes on a glorious spree. Drunkenness, that's Jim's escape.

There are dozens of escapes. Day dreams. Indigestion. Sensitiveness. Bad temper. Religion—the wrong kind of religion. Insanity. Suicide. Escapes, every one of them.

What's the answer? Education. Teach youngsters from the time they're babies to face life. Teach them to think things through. Don't let them duck or shirk. Don't shield or pamper them. Make them adjust themselves to reality. Make them face the common hazards—meet the common test. Make them feel that it's a proud thing to be a human being and a shameful thing to be a rabbit. Then they won't want to escape.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

I WISH I had a slender throat
On shoulders lily-white,
A voice to rival thrush's note
And hair like dusky night.
A soul to match a lovely form,
A temper half divine,
A courage staunch through every storm,
All these, I choose for mine.
I would be wise, oh, very wise,
In lore of ancient days,
Would know all science can devise
In Earth's most modern ways.
Yes, I would join such company
As fills the ranks of saints,
For I, in short, would love to be
The girl your fancy paints!

NEW YORK, May 11—Thoughts while strolling: Policemen who switch traffic just as you reach the curb. The easy-going pipe smokers on bus platforms. Brisk summer trade comes to the two-wheeled hansoms. A loose and bewildering horse from a riding academy.

Neckties embroidered with New York scenes. Ruby de Remer and Ben Troup. Charlie Driscoll's purple striped suit. Those young girls with skeptical eyes. Youth always has a tragic earnestness to those past 40. Bored matrons imprisoned in a dreadful leisure. And always shopping to forget.

A matinee idol walks slowly to his car at the curb and quickens a few pulses. He's entirely unconscious of the stares; I wouldn't fool you. Katherine Brush, the writer. Violet sellers. Brisk young men with frat pins who have launched their careers as bond-salesmen.

Nothing so annoying as a roller-skater behind you. The mummified fellows who cling to the club windows throughout the summer. Charles Dana Gibson's minstrel collar. Russian ikons on sale everywhere. A bare-headed man, handcuffed and blaspheming, is dragged into a patrol wagon.

Short top-coats of Teddy bear cloth. The watchman in plain clothes in front of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s, home. Those sedate and magnificent side street hotels that never advertise. And have a tomb-like stillness. Must be terrible to cross the lobby in squeaking shoes and register from Gallipolis, O.

Ought to be a law against keeping puppies in stuffy dog shop windows. The sandwich stand with velvet draperies. That makes it a salon. Sign on a settlement house: "Happiness only comes when it is earned." The lemonade carts drawn by ponies—an East Side idea brought uptown.

Church bells ring. The sun flashes into the splendor of its daily death. And Broadway quickens for the night. The furtive figures who come out with dusk. One sign pops on, and in a twinkle the street is aglow.

ONE of the big transient hotels in Times sq. takes no chances with beats. It renders a bill to all patrons every third morning. The bill must be paid by 6 that evening. Or out you go!

IT is not easy these days to leave a telephone book in a $2 suitcase in lieu of a week's board. The three-day limit is being seriously considered in all taverns. And when the staggering amounts out of which they are defrauded yearly are scanned, they cannot be blamed. The average hotel is tolerant. Only the professional beat is prosecuted. The victim of unavoidable hard luck is given a chance to settle.

IN the best hotels the familiar type of derbied Peeping Tom house detective is no more. He was the bumptious bully who regarded every patron as a potential crook and was out to "get" him. He jock-eyed many reputable hotels into awkward law suits, and now his wings have been clipped. The new type merely reports what he sees to an executive in charge of such matters, and action depends upon superior judgment.

THERE is an actor who has had so many trying experiences with house detectives that when there is a knock at his hotel door now he instinctively calls out: "All right. I'm packing."

HOTELS are at the mercy of the public because of the nature of their business. It took the stately Waldorf several years to rid Peacock Alley of the famous "W-s Boys"—a group of flim-flammers in tony clothes who were marvelously expert in confidence rackets. The high class crook gravitates naturally to the hotel lobby, because he is likely to meet people of importance. And that is the chief reason for the small lobby in the modern hotel.

Why Not?

This is his description of the girl of 1930: "Two bare arms, except for a few bracelets. She won't be handicapped by clothes. Legs and arms will be entirely free and sleeves will go into storage. She will be an athlete, Miss 1930 will."

She MAY be an athlete and she MAY be a consumptive, unless she knows enough to put very heavy woolen stockings on those legs, and very heavy woolen underwear under those little skirts in winter.

But so far as the question of MODESTY goes, since women have cut off their skirts just above the knee, they would be really more modest to dress as Mr. Flagg suggests.

To show your knees, ADVERTISING IMMODESTY, is really more immodest than frankly showing the entire leg, if that is your desire, and if you think that pleases men.

IT DOESN'T, BY THE WAY—men like something left to their imagination—but that is another story.

There is nothing immodest, never was, about the lady in the circus riding bareback, or flipping from one trapeze to another. She wears her tights, her smile, her bodice. She really IS an athlete. Everybody admires her artistic shape, her decency and self-respect.

When she gets down from the trapeze, hops off the horse, she puts on real clothes. And she's a "lady."

Women will come back to real clothes eventually; not necessarily to long skirts, which date from the Turk and the harem, but to clothing that will cover her body as it should be covered.

By hook or by crook she will manage to invent breeches less ugly than men's, with warm stockings, solid, substantial shoes with heels and soles fit to carry her over the earth. WARMTH for cold weather, to preserve the vitality which is life.

Then she will be a real woman, and also an athlete if she wants to be—although being an athlete isn't woman's business. Hers is the power to create the human race. And that counts, not the power to lift a dumbbell—or to be one.
